Crowd Is Peaceful After Sunrise Chat

WASHINGTON (AP) — As thousands of antiwar protestors gathered today in a park behind the White House, the Nixon administration made good its promise to hear their views. The President himself started the fact-to-face dialogue.

Nixon startled a small group camped near the Lincoln Memorial with an unheralded 5 a.m. appearance at which he pleaded for understanding and said:

"Go shout your slogans on the Ellipse. Just keept it peaceful."

All through the morning, on a warm and sloudless spring day, the demonstrators streamed toward the Ellipse, a huge park across the street from the south law of the White House.

There were few police in sight and the crowd seemed in a happy, relaxed mood.

At midmorning, police estimated that about 75,000 were either gathered or en route to the demonstration.

Nixon had ordered the Ellipse made available for the protest against the Vietnam war and the U.S. incursion into Cambodia he ordered a week earlier. He also made administration officials available to meet with the young people.

A coordinating center at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had scheduled 42 meetings involving nearly 3,000 students by 11 a.m. HEW Secretary Robert Finch met with a student delegation from Penn State for nearly an hour.

Collegians Met With Bayonets

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Violence marred some demonstrations as protests of President Nixon's Southeast Asia policy continued at colleges across the nation and at Washington, D.C., where thousands rallied for a march today on the White House.

At the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, 11 persons were hospitalized with stab wounds after National Guardsmen with fixed bayonets advanced on 200 student peace protesters. The confrontation followed the arrest by police of 140 sit-in demonstrators who had offered no resistance.

Violent confrontations also occurred in Carbondale, Ill., between police and students from Southern Illinois University; and in Buffalo, N.Y., where 12 youths were wounded by birdshot during a demonstration.

A student from the University of Iowa at Iowa City was subdued by a chemical agent when he tried to wrench shotguns from police officers during police-student scuffles. Two battalions of the National Guard were placed on standby alert. Two students were arrested.

Cambridge, Mass., police chased some 500 rampaging protestors through Harvard Square after a peaceful antiwar rally by 30,000 persons. The rampaging youths broke windows and blocked traffic.

The nationwide demonstrations and disorders have continued for several days in protest against the killing of four students by National Guardsmen at Kent State University and President Nixon's decision to send American combat troops into Cambodia.

The National Students Association in Washington listed 437 of the country's 1,500 colleges and universities on strike or closed in support of the protest. There were protests on hundreds of other campuses.

All National Guard troops were withdrawn Friday from Kent State and President Robert I. White announced the school would remained closed at least until the end of June.

On some other campuses, movements to reopen the schools began and some students criticized the strikers for denying them access to classes.

Overseas, student protests against the Kent State deaths and the entrance of American troops into Cambodia broke out in West Berlin, Munich and Frankurt, Germany; Caracas, Maracaibo, and Merida, Venezuela; Oslo; Barcelona; Paris; Sydney, Melbourne and Brisbane, Australia; and many other cities.

Students in Munich burned a huge American flag after speakers accused the United States of "raw aggression" in Indochina. Thousands marched in West

'Straights' Form New Wave For Collegiate Protests

By C. P. McCARTHY

The Berkeley street people and radical students—and their violent trademark—have been left behind in a new wave of protest against U. S. involvement in Cambodia, a 22-year-old Tiburon student at the University of California said in an interview yesterday.

Margaret Helfand, a trim, attractive graduate student in architecture, said the new protestors are regular people, the "straights" as it were, who had been quiet and largely uninvolved before but now feel the need for doing something.

She is one of hundreds of students at the Berkeley campus who have organized to dedicate themselves full time to getting the U. S. out of Cambodia and out of Southeast Asia.

She admitted "it would be naive to think that all troops will be pulled out of Southeast Asia immediately, but there definitely will be a change in policy. Public opinion will force a change in policy."

To encourage that public opinion, se says, and to mai it in a massive cry the President will not be able to ignore, Miss Helfand and others, students and faculty alike, have been working 18 hours a day and more all week — ringing doorbells, making posters, calling business and professional people and distributing petitions and information sheets.

In spite of possible adverse community reaction, Miss Helfand and students and faculty distressed over expansion of the war — and at the same time disturbed with the actions of radicals — intend to stay out of classes for the rest of the semester in order to devote full time to their efforts.

"It shows how much energy was pent up in the past," she said. "People who wanted to protest, but didn't go for violence, are now letting it out."

She said she had been sympathetic with the peace movement for several years, but not too active. But this time, "I feel not only that it's necessary, but I think something is going to happen."

She and the others might be considered the silent majority of students. They've stood by for years believing the war was wrong, they say, but never getting involved and never turning to violence.

But the most recent turn of events in the Vietnam war has

Few Watch Colorful Marin Protest

An estimated 300 colorfully dressed war protesters marched through downtown Mill Valley today on their way to a two-hour rally in Old Mill Park.

Protesters at the demonstration, sponsored by an ad hoc group called the Peace Action Committee, were evenly divided among teen-agers, small children and middle-aged housewives. They were scheduled to begin their mile march about 10 a.m. but the start was delayed until almost 11.

Very few onlookers turned out in Mill Valley's business section to watch as the procession — which stretched about four city blocks — passed through, lead by Rev. Allan Barnet, a teacher at San Jose State College.

In another antiwar development, the Marin Peace Coalition, which conducted subdued rallies in San Rafael Thursday and yesterday, has called on College of Marin students to stay away from classes after the school reopens Monday in order to devote full attention to protesting U.S. involvement in Indochina.

"We are angry and frustrated but are trying to act positively to affect events by asking students not to attend classes but get out into the community and work to affect the 'silent majority' President Nixon talks about so much," Curt Rutter, a coalition member, told a group of about 150 gathered at the Civic Center yesterday.

"We plan this to be a nonviolent strike," Steven E. Dreyer, a member of the coalition's steering committee, said today. "We will set up an informational picket line at 7 a.m. Monday and pass out leaflets to students to try to convince them to join us in striking."

The coalition won't prevent students from attending classes if they wish, Dreyer said, but the group believes it has the backing of "most of the students at the college."

The peace group will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at the Newman Center, 850 College Avenue, Kentfield, to make plans and announce the boycott to the community, according to Dreyer.

At yesterday's rally, Thomas T. Storer, who gave up his campaign for Marin Municipal Court judge to concentrate on getting the U.S. out of Southeast Asia, called for a grassroots campaign to bring pressure on the government.

"It is time that this nation admitted it made a collossal, horrible mistake and get out

Nixon's Press Parley Defends Cambodia Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has defended his Southeast Asia policy as the road to the quick peace his critics demand, while indicating a willingness to listen to the demonstrators gathered by the thousands near the White House today to protest U.S. involvement in Indochina.

The President pledged in a nationally broadcast news conference Friday night—his first since Jan. 30—to spend all of today in a White House ringed by antiwar demonstrators and security forces.

The chief executive took a generally conciliatory attitude toward college-age protesters during the 33-minute session with reporters, while arguing his decision to send U.S. ground troops into Cambodia offers the best chance of achieving peace. (See also, story page 2.)

Cambodia and campus unrest dominated the news conference, and Nixon said he and the antiwar demonstrators have the same goal in mind—peace in Southeast Asia.

While declaring that he will not attempt to stop Vice President Spiro T. Agnew or other administration officials from speaking their minds, Nixon added a key phrase that presumably he hopes will be taken to heart by government spokesmen:

"I would hope that all of the members of this administration would have in mind . . . a rule that I have always had, and it is a very simple one: When the action is hot, keep the rhetoric cool."

And, in Boise, Idaho, Agnew followed that advice. He eliminated some caustic comments from a prepared speech, saying he was toning down his remarks in defending the administration's Cambodia policy.

Agnew delayed his talk to a GOP dinner until after Nixon's news conference and then said: "If my abandonment of the first two pages of this speech in some small way will help cool the violent situation in the United States, I'm going to do it."

The vice president scrapped the already-released references to "choleric young intellectuals and tired, embittered elders" mounting "shrill attacks" against the administration.

Nixon said Agnew "will answer for anything that he has said" and added he would no

Mekong River Armada Hits Deep Into Red Territory

SAIGON (AP) — A force of 30 U.S. naval boats and 70 South Vietnamese craft launched a drive up the Mekong River today in the first waterborne assault into Cambodia, allied headquarters announced. Within hours, six South Vietnamese gunboats suppressed enemy fire more than half way up the river.

A dispatch from Cambodia said that after enemy sniper fire was silenced, helicopters began unloading South Vietnamese troops near the enemy-held ferry crossing at Neak Luong.

At the same time more than 10,000 American and South Vietnamese troops launched three new drives inside Cambodia against enemy bases. Hundreds of American tanks, armored personnel carriers, helicopter gunships and fighter-bombers were committed to the new offensives. The official announcements came one on top of another.

Military sources also announced the biggest success in the campaign to wreck enemy bases—a 300-ton stockpile of munitions and food found by U.S. troops in Cambodia 80 miles northwest of Saigon. It

Highlights Of Nixon's Remarks On U.S. Protests, Cambodia Acts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are textual highlights of President Nixon's remarks during his nationally broadcast press conference Friday night. (See also, story on page 1):

Those who protest want peace. They want to reduce American casualties and they want our boys brought home. I made the decision (to send U.S. ground troops into Cambodia) for the very reasons that they are protesting... what I have done will accomplish the goals they want. It will shorten this war.

I would like to try as best I can to do that (open up meaningful communications with the college-age generation). Sometimes they, as you know, talk so loudly that it is difficult to be heard, as we have learned during the campaigns.

When I came to the presidency, I did not send these men to Vietnam. There were 525,000 men there. And since I have been here, I have been working 18 to 20 hours a day, mostly on Vietnam, trying to bring these men home.

... the country is not headed for revolution. The very fact that we do have the right to dissent... the very fact that the President of the United States... asked that that demonstration occur not just around the Washington Monument but on the Ellipse where I could hear it—and you can hear it pretty well from here, I can assure you—that fact is an indication that when you have that kind of safety valve you are not going to have revolution which comes from repression.

The second point, with regard to repression. That is nonsense, in my opinion. I do not see that critics of my policies are repressed.

No, (the South Vietnamese do not have to abide by the same June 30 deadline to get out of Cambodia as the United States). I would expect that the South Vietnamese would come out approximately at the same time that we do because when we come out our logistical support and air support will also come out with them.

The action (in Cambodia) is actually going faster than we had anticipated. The middle of next week the first units, American units, will come out. The end of next week the second group of American uiits will come out. The great majority of all American units will be out by the second week of June, and all Americans of all kinds, including advisers, will be out of Cambodia by the end of June.

... I will say that it is my belief, based on what we have completed to date, that we have bought at least six months and probably eight months of time for the training of... the Army of South Vietnam... Rockets by the thousands and small arms ammunition by the millions have already been captured and those rockets and small arms will not be killing Americans in the next few months.

This action is a decisive move, and this action also puts the enemy on warning that if it escalates while we are trying to de-escalate, we will move decisively and not step by step.

Now that America is there... if we withdraw from Vietnam and allow the enemy to come into Vietnam and massacre the civilians there by the millions, as they would... let me say that America is finished insofar as the peacekeeper in the Asian world is concerned.

... I will predict now that there will be an agreement with the Soviet Union on arms limitation. When that agreement comes, it will have great significance.

I believe that by the end of the year we will have passed the trillion dollar mark in terms of Gross National Product. I believe that the year 1970 will be a good year economically...

Los Angeles Teachers Optimistic Over Truce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Optimism prevailed today that two meetings on Sunday may end the four-week-old teachers' strike in the nation's second largest school district as both sides indicated general acceptance of a mediator's proposals.

Officials of the United Teachers of Los Angeles, who sanctioned the walkout April 13, said Friday they would recommend acceptance of the proposals put together by Dr. Benjamin Aaron, UCLA law professor who has specialized in labor relations.

Officials of the Los Angeles School District were privately optimistic that the City Board of Education also would approve the pact.

"We didn't get everything we wanted," said UTLA President Robert Ransom, "but we got major improvements."

They include: A 7 per cent pay hike; reduction of class sizes by three pupils; restoration of the bulk of the budget cuts previously approved by the school board; establishment of special reading classes; extra help for poverty area schools, plus a greater voice for teachers in administrative decisions

Money for the programs hopefully will become available from the California Legislature or through passage of Prop. 8 on the June ballot.

Should both sources fail, the teachers and the school district would work together to find new revenues.

The UTLA will vote on the proposed pact at a mass membership meeting Sunday at 3 p.m. The union session will be preceded by an executive meeting of the Board of Education at 10 a.m. that day.

School officials estimated that Friday 11,552 teachers, representing 46 per cent of the district's 25,384 faculty, were off the job. They said 223,998 of the district's 637,309 students were absent.

Israel Flies Jets Against Arab Bases

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israel said it sent warplanes into southern Lebanon today on a 90-minute mission that blasted Arab guerrilla bases in retaliation for terror attacks on Israeli civilians. A guerrilla communique said one Israeli jet was shot down and another hit.

The strike against Lebanon was the first in four months, and Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Israeli forces would keep hitting back at the Arabs —even at the risk of international criticism—to defend the lives of Israeli citizens.

An official Lebanese government statement on the raid today made no mention of casualties but it said the Israeli raiders damaged some crops in the area. A spokesman for the Al-Fatah guerrilla organization in the Lebanese capital of Beirut said there were no guerrilla casualties.

Dayan pledged to continue such retaliatory strikes in an interview broadcast by the Israeli state radio on the eve of independence day celebrations.

"The question facing us is not whether we can live in isolation, for we cannot stay alive at all when we are about to be killed," Dayan said.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, asked yesterday for a "return to civility" when campuses throughout California are scheduled to reopen Monday.

Bagley, seeking reelection this year, said, "I ask, I urge, upon reopening of these institutions, that our students rise to the occasion and themselves institute a 'Monday Moratorium' on all violence. For the sake of civilized society, this should be done. Even a few minutes of silence at noon would help and would dramatize the need for a return to civility."

Short-Haired Protest

HANOVER, N.H. (AP) — The headquarters of the student antiwar strikers has the usual equipment, telephones, typewriters and such. It also has a barber chair.

The students are planning a weekend canvas of citizens to enlist support for the antiwar movement, and feared shaggy locks might repel possible support.

A student who moonlights as an amateur barber said he was doing a land-office business trimming Dartmouth students' hair.

Reds Flay Thant

HONG KONG (AP) — Communist North Vietnam's official radio accused U.N. Secretary General U Thant today of being a "tool of the United States who does his best to cover up the crime of American agression in Indochina."

Criticizing U Thant's call for an international conference on ending the war in Indochina, Radio Hanoi said it was "most revealing that U Thant not once mentioned that it was U.S. imperialist aggression that created the war and U.S. imperialist aggression that is continuing the war."

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Polaroid Co. distributed telegram blanks to some 9,000 employes Friday with the invitation to address their views on the Vietnam-Cambodian situation to members of Congress.

Castro Sugar Lags

MIAMI (AP)—Cuba's sugar harvest, the crop Fidel Castro has pegged the honor of his revolution to, has fallen a million tons behind schedule and promises to lag even more.

Radio Havana said Friday night the harvest total had reached seven million tons. That put the crop a full million tons off the pace set by the government.

A calendar issued by the Sugar Industry Ministry called for seven million tons to be reached April 20 and eight million on May 7.

Those were two steps on the way to 10 million tons by July 15. Castro has said repeatedly in public statements that the honor of his Communist revolution hangs on reaching the 10-million ton mark.

Saigon Jails 76

SAIGON (AP) — South Vietnamese police today jailed 76 students who attempted to occupy the Ministry of education building in Saigon.

The high school and university students were protesting the closing of their schools by the government and continued detention of student leaders.

About 2,000 students held a rally Friday in Da Nang, south Vietnam's second largest city, to protest the slayings of Vietnamese in Cambodia and the jailing of student leaders in Saigon. Fifteen students were arrested and barbed wire barricades were thrown up around schools in Da Nang.

Tycoon Quits Job

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Bernard Cornfeld resigned today as chief executive officer of the troubled Investors Overseas Services mutual funds empire.

An IOS announcement said Edward M. Cowett, president of IOS, Ltd., the parent company, joined him in resigning. Both will continue as members of the board.

Sir Eric Wyndham White of Britain was selected interim board chairman and Richard M. Hammerman took over as chairman of the executive committee and president of IOS, Ltd.

Layoffs Bite Deep

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. announced Friday it will begin laying off salaried personnel in the next week or 10 days, the first such layoffs since the recession of 1958.

The extent of the cutback will not be known until the completion of a division-by-division and central staff review of personnel requirements.

GM earlier laid off about 13,500 of its 450,000 U.S. and Canadian hourly employes until further notice. The automaker employs about 145,000 salaried workers.

State Raise Urged

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The California State Employes Association has strongly endorsed a report calling for seven per cent pay hikes for state workers.

The seven per cent recommendation was sent to Gov. Reagan and the legislature Friday by the State Personnel Board. The governor's budget calls for a five per cent increase.

Pollution Warning

LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Former Interior Secretary Stewart Udall says the United States could become the most hated nation in the world because of its pollution.

Udall said Friday that other nations may envy us now for what we have, but as this country keeps dumping and using resources foreign peoples will begin "to hate us."

Udall said new means of transportation must be developed because cars alone cause 50 per cent of air pollution.

Joy Over Buses

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. (AP) — Battle Creek celebrated the arrival of 17 new city buses Friday, with a parade featuring two bands, beauty queens and an official "changing of the guard" ceremony.

Jesse Hicks drove an old city bus to the center of the celebration and was presented with the keys to a new bus by Mayor Frederick Bridges. Miss Battle Creek 1968, Bonnie Trafolla, took part in a skit in the symbolic "laying on of keys" ceremony.

Hicks then climbed into a new bus filled with contestants for the title of Miss Battle Creek and drove off at the head of a parade.

Newspaper Shrinks

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Times, which published a 64-page paper last Saturday, was down to 50 pages today with extended chapel meetings and the threat of a citywide newspaper strike present for the sixth-straight week.

An apparent showdown, in time to halt the ad-filled Sunday papers, was averted Friday when the newspaper deliverers union retracted a walkout threat and decided to resume bargaining with the Newspaper Publishers Association.

The Times, which claims to have lost more than $3 million in advertising revenue due to typographical workers' chapel meetings consuming 17 1-2 hours each day, was able to set and print the full text of President Nixon's press conference only after Bertram Powers, typographical union head told his men to do the work because of the importance of the story.

Mobe Files Stolen

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 40-card index file listing members, contributors, and organizations working to end the war in Vietnam was among the items stolen Friday when the New York offices of the Student Mobilization Committee were ransacked.

"I want to know how even desks and chairs could be stolen from the building in an area which is heavily policed and where they are always watching us," Miss Claudia Edison, secretary of an affiliated group, The Vietnam Moratorium Committee said.

ACCIDENT INJURES THREE

An unidentified woman, one of three victims of an auto accident yesterday at Tamalpais Junction on Shoreline Highway, is given first aid prior to being taken to the hospital. The driver of the car, Barbara Lee, 19, of Sonoma, was reported in satisfactory condition today at Kaiser Foundation Hospital in San Rafael with undisclosed injuries. Two of the girl's passengers were treated at Marin General Hospital. Carol A. Green, 23, of 241 Greene Street, Mill Valley, suffered multiple cuts on her chin and right knee, and Harry Boyer, 25, of 12 Kings Way, Mill Valley, suffered a broken right arm and sprained ankle. The California Highway Patrol said the automobile crashed into awning piping at 2:20 p.m. at Dan's Market after Miss Lee swerved to avoid hitting a car which fled after the crash.

pushed them into action. "Cambodia is the last straw," Miss Helfand said yesterday.

While Cambodia has spurred them, their belief that this time the protest will matter sustains them.

"When we see people in high positions concurring with our opinions, we don't think we're that far from success," she said.

"Violence isn't necessary at this point. I see some hope. Maybe a few years ago people like myself didn't feel so confident, but in the last few days we've seen that public opinion can be mobilized."

Mobilizing that opinion, she said, has provided constructive options to violence.

The peace movement has ceased to be a partisan issue as well, she said. "It's a constitutional issue. The President has usurped powers. The people on all sides are concerned about preserving the constitutional process."

A student in the university's school of environmental design, Miss Helfand has been serving as a liaison between the efforts of that school — primarily designing and producing posters and other materials — and the central strike committee which is coordinating the new public opinion peace drive.

When she explained all this to her father, Bernard Helfand of 240 Loma Avenue, she said he expressed a concern for her not being in class.

But he agreed with her, she said, when she told him "this one time is more important than it's ever been."

NIXON

more censor his vice president than he would muzzle Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel, who recently cautioned Nixon in a personal letter of the dangers of alienating the nation's youth.

At the outset, Nixon said he sent troops into Cambodia for the very reasons that have prompted protesters to march here and across the land.

"I am concerned," he said, "because I know how deeply they feel, but I know that what I have done will accomplish the goals that they want. It will shorten this war. It will reduce American casualties.

"It will allow us to go forward with our withdrawal program. The 150,000 Americans that I announced for withdrawal the next year will come home on schedule. It will in my opinion serve the cause of a just peace in Vietnam."

The President said the destruction of enemy sanctuaries in Cambodia is moving faster than expected and added the great majority of U.S. troops will be pulled out of Cambodia by mid-June and all of them would be gone by July. (Later other white house sources said the U.S. did not expect to return troops to Cambodia at any later date.)

Asked if the nation might be heading either for revolution or repression, Nixon cited the "sometimes quite personal" criticism he has been getting from some quarters as evidence that his critics are not being repressed.

Moreover, he said, "this country is not headed for revolution" because "we do have the safety valves of the right to dissent."

The combined river force, along with U.S. air cover, is opening the Mekong River for a flotilla moving toward the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh with relief supplies for Vietnamese living there.

The U.S. Command in Saigon said today that 1,233 enemy troops have been killed in a week-long operation in the Fishhook area of Cambodia. American losses there were put at 37 killed and 139 wounded. U.S. casualties in the Cambodian operation over-all were listed as 53 killed and 182 wounded since the drive began.

In South Vietnam, enemy gunners mounted 22 rocket and mortar attacks on allied positions, the U.S. Command said, a sharp drop from the 60 reported the previous night.

Headquarters said two Americans were killed and 28 wounded in the rocket and mortar attacks.

TV Watcher Clarifies Mystery Of 'Zonk'

"Zonk," the meaning of which frustrated Independent-Journal caption writers Wednesday when the word appeared in a photo of a banner hoisted above the lawn at Tamalpais High School, has been defined by a Tiburon man.

According to Robert R. Peck of 23 East Circle Drive, the word is used to describe "coming out with a big nothing" on the television program, "Let's Make a Deal."

of Southeast Asia as soon as possible," Storer said.

Philip Drath of San Rafael, 1966 peace candidate for Congress, showed a film of his trip into North Vietnam in 1967 with the crew of the Phoenix to deliver medical supplies.

The strike at the College of Marin will give students a chance to "redirect their educational energies," Dreyer said.

Coalition members plan to move the protest away from the college and into the community by door-to-door canvassing starting today and lasting until Wednesday.

Students will fan out in Marin County and talk to citizens in an effort to build a broad base of opposition to President Nixon's policies in Southeast Asia, according to Dreyer.

"The canvassers will ask homeowners to sign two petitions," he said. "One recognizes that the invasion of Cambodia is "an insult to humanity," and urges withdrawal. The other supports AB 1466, by Assemblyman Bill Greene, D-Watts, that would require the attorney general to file suit on behalf of any California man drafted to serve in an undeclared war.

The coalition expects total coverage of Marin by canvassers, Dreyer siad, and will send workers into shopping centers and businesses in an effort to enlist the support of the business community.

"We don't know what our plans after Wednesday will be," Dreyer said. "That depends on the number of students willing to give up class time and possible grades to make an effort to end the war."

Another mass meeting Wednesday will determine if the strike will continue, Dreyer said.

At the Mill Valley rally, police cars preceded and followed the procession, which was silent except for occasional songs.

The usual signs and placards were in evidence in the procession, which was light-hearted in mood. In the hour while marchers waited in the parking lot at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, several petitions were circulated, including ones supporting Assemblyman Greene's bill.

TUNNEL ACCIDENT

Sausalito fireman Fred Bunker checked a damaged van involved in an accident yesterday at about 2 p.m. in the Waldo Tunnel on Highway 101. Three persons were injured. The California Highway Patrol said a vehicle driven by Kurt Schloth, 27, of Oakland, ran out of gas and stopped in the tunnel, and was hit from behind by the van, driven by Michael J. Swanson, 22, of Denver. Schloth was treated at Marin General Hospital for a cut scalp, Swanson for a fractured nose and multple cuts, and Schloth's passenger, William Baker of Oakland, for a cut nose and left leg.

New Troubles For Stables At Novato

The Wild West saga being enacted at a Novato stables took yet another turn yesterday when the owner of the Novato Thoroughbred Farm was charged with a felony count of fraud because he allegedly misrepresented the father of an unborn colt.

Arrested on a warrant on which bail had been set at $31,000 was Danny Leroy Sedgwick, 30. After an appearance in Marin Municipal Court, where Deputy Dist. Atty. J. Michael Anthony described Sedgwick as an ex-convict who served time for bad checks, Sedgwick's bail was reduced to $7,500 by Judge Peter Allen Smith.

The horseman posted the bail and the case was continued to Friday for entry of plea.

This latest incident stemmed, according to Anthony, from investigation of many complaints against Sedgwick's operation on Atherton Avenue.

Anthony said that Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Kelley of Fortuna bought a pregnant mare from Sedgwick in February, paying $4,000 for the animal upon the assurance that her unborn colt was sired by an Arabian stallion named Fasr.

A check with Fasr's owner, Elmer Hudson of Broadwater County, Mont., led to information that the mare had never been near the stallion, according to Anthony, who said that the new owners paid $2,500 more than the horse was worth.

'Numerous reports" about Sedgwick are still being investigated, Anthony said, who added that Sedgwick had been convicted in 1967 in Placer County for a similar fraud offense.

The stables property has been the scene of a number of other incidents this spring. On March 19 the humane society officials revoked Sedgwick's license, and the horseman is suing to have that reinstated.

Then on March 29, a man who subleases the Atherton Stables from Sedgwick was savagely beaten. The victim, Daller Lee Wyatt, 36, claimed in a $500,000 suit against Sedgwick that his attackers acted on the instigation of Sedgwick.

The alleged attackers, two Sacramento ranch hands, Pierre Jon Hall and James Marquis, have been charged with felony assault.

The two men are still suffering from severe bullet wounds, allegedly the result of being shot by Wyatt as they fled the stables property in a truck.

PROTEST

Berlin and Frankfurt, many shouting, "Nixon, murderer!" There were shootings, injuries, arrests and charges by police using water cannons.

Firebombing, arson and vandalism continued to plague a number of American colleges and some off-campus buildings. Most of the destruction was directed at ROTC offices or buildings connected with the military.

At the University of Wisconsin, several buildings were firebombed and firemen put out more than 40 fires on campus, most of them minor. It was the fourth day of violence at the campus.

More than $100,000 damage was caused by a fire in the administration building of Concordia Teachers College, in River Forest, Ill.

More than 200 students were arrested on the University of Iowa campus in Iowa City after they broke into a building that formerly served as the Iowa capitol and set several fires.

Seven persons were injured at the University of Washington in Seattle after police clashed with students who had smashed windows, set up street barricades and ignited several fires on and near the campus.

Blazes or explosions were reported at the University of Michigan; Colorado State University in Fort Collins; Minnesota-Deluth, Valparaiso, Ind: a State University campus at New Platz, N.Y.; New London, Conn., armory; the University of North Carolina; Marquette University in Milwaukee; and a Queens, N.Y., Army depot which stores trucks for the ROTC unit at St. John's University.

Peaceful protest rallies were held by some 5,000 persons in Columbus, Ohio; 5,000 at the University of California at Berkeley; 6,000 in Sacramento, Calif.; and 7,000 in Providence R.I.

At Iowa State University at Ames, plans went ahead for today's Veishea Parade, the traditional and lavish spring rites at the university.

Hong Cong Rite To Quiet Spirits

HONG KONG (UPI) — Tens of thousands of Hong Kong residents trooped to an outlying of Cheung Chau Friday to watch a procession of unicorn and lion dancers in a festival to placate the vengeful spirits.

Gov. Sir David Trench was on hand for the ceremony which is commonly known as the 'Bun Festival.'

The Bun Festival is held yearly to appease the spirits which tradition says belong to people murdered by pirates on the island some 120 years ago.

CAPITOL

ranking officials conducted meetings with student groups ranging in size from a handful to 600.

And coordinators said they could handle three times the volume of students who called.

The new mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, which organized the protest, planned to turn huge loudspeakers toward the executive mansion and hoped to carry eight coffins into the White House grounds.

"We will lay on his doorstep the voices of the real silent majority," said Ron Young, the New Mobe's coordinator.

The President opened up the possibility he might speak to some of the demonstration leaders, but told associates he did not want to exploit the dialogue just to be able to say he had talked to some of the students.

He said he thought his sunrise get-together with the group at Lincoln Memorial was more useful.

"No TV cameras, no press," he said. "They didn't feel the awesome power of the White House. I was trying to relate to them in a way that they could feel I understand their problems."

Later, Nixon said, "it was one of the most interesting experiences of my life."

Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, told a group of Bennington College students that "the message is finally getting across and the government has to take note of the massive feeling." He credited the efforts of young people for putting the President into a conciliatory mood.

The official attitude, obviously, was far different from the Nov. 15 Moratorium Day demonstration at which the President had said he would not let foreign policy be dictated in the street.

There was a single tear gas incident—hours before the demonstration started. A policeman accidentally dropped a canister at district police headquarters and a 60-man detachment rushed from the building, crying, coughing and wheezing.

In an interview with the Washington Daily News after Nixon's sunrise rtpi Barbara Hirsch, 24, and Lauree Moss, 24, both social workers from Detroit, Nixon was quoted as saying to Miss Hirsch, "You're 24? My daughter Tricia is 24."

When Miss Moss said she was 24, too, "the President did a doubletake," she said.

"He expected us to say we were 18 or 19. I'm sure that's why he was amazed," Miss Moss said.

White House officials said the young people at the Memorial were surprised by Nixon's arrival. But, the officials said, the youths were respectful, amiable and somewhat awed.

Some of them—mostly boys—told the President they were concerned about the environment and noted that there was scum and debris on the Reflecting Pool in front of the Memorial.

So, there was talk about dirty streets, air and water. Nixon gave assurances that "we're going to clean up those things."

"But you can clean all those up," he added, "and have clean, sanitized cities, but no warmth, no color, no quality. The real problem is finding some meaning to life."

He told the youths to have a good time in Washington and, as he put it, "don't go away bitter."

Nixon told associates the one thing he didn't want to do was to bring some of the student demonstrators into the White House and exploit them or just to be able to say he had talked to some students. He said he thought the little get-together at the Memorial was far more useful.

Nixon also expressed concern about the way blacks are separating from the whites. He told the young people: "You must find a way of communicating with them."

He also said, in a sort of aside, that Indians are the most mistreated of all our people, even though they have never known the bonds of slavery."

And some Mexican-Americans in California, he said, are worse off than the Negroes.

White House sources said the first members of the group that Nixon met at the Memorial were mostly from Alfred University in Alfred, N.Y.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

For Her Special Day Here Is A Version Of 'What Is A Mother'

DEAR HELEN:

For her special day, here's my version of What is A Mother?

Between the impishness of teen-age and the pleasant love of grandmotherhood, we find an understainding useful, c a r i n g woman called a mother.

Mothers come in super special packages—and in all sorts of short, long, mini, maxi dresses, also bellbottoms, or just plain jeans; with delicate voice calling you for dinner when company is here, and a harsh voice when you are out later on a date than you are supposed to be; but still inside, they are alike.

Mothers are not hard to find, because they are usually at the supermarket, dress shop, beauty salon or any other places where she can spend money.

When you want to ask her something crazy or serious or just a "May I go out with Whatzisname t o n i g h t?" she usually gives you a grin and the same phrase, "Go ask your father, Honey."

No one is more likely to brag about her kids, and to cry at the thought that they'll be leaving her soon — in 20 years or so.

She goes for roses, a box of dark chocolates from Dad, and her budget raised for the house, which she really uses for the family. She also likes making hot pink dresses with ribbons on them for her little girl, who may be age 15. She groans about P-TA but wouldn't miss a meeting. She loves planning parties and being elected chairman of her woman's club (about which she also groans).

She doesn't really like Dad to come home from work late, or his other stock excuses for not cleaning out the garage, etc. She doesn't dig washing dishes, so she leaves dishwasher ads around and Dad thinks it was his idea to buy one.

She has the appetite of a Twiggy to watch her figure, and feels hurt if Dad doesn't. She also has the ability to run through a shopping center during Christmas rush and come out with just the right gifts; the disposition of a squirrel, and a heart as warm as a fireplace.

Only a mother can close her purse, containing: One tube of lipstick, (well, mabe three), a compact, a comb, a picture of her daughter, son and husband, etc., a wallet which is empty, a handful of change, a scarf, checks, gloves, pins, recipes, a charge card, another charge card, and still more charge cards, keys to the house, car and various other things now forgotten, pen and pencil, note pad, paper tissues, gum, breath mints, and at least a dozen other items.

She has the love of God, the sympathy of a child mourning over an abandoned cat, and the wrath of Ralph Nader when she feels she is being cheated.

You can lose her in a store, but find her chatting with a person she doesn't even know.

You may tell your friends she is mean, and won't let you do anything, but when you are in trouble, just call for her and she'll be there before you can say "Nobody loves me."

You know you can't do without her, so why try? Just be pleasant, and helpful as you can. It's worth it. You'll see. — M. ONG

Younger, More Affluent Parents

Tomorrow's parents will be younger, more affluent and better schooled than today's parents, reports the National Industrial Conference Board.

By 1980, for example, 47 per cent of the families with a child present will be headed by a person under 35. And by that time over 37 per cent of the family units will have incomes of $15,000 or more a year. Less than 20 per cent of families with children today are in that income bracket.

Fake An Industrial Zipper

DEAR EUNICE,

So many patterns for sportswear call for the large industrial type zippers. In the city where we live, they are almost impossible to get and if I do find them, they are never the right length. What can you suggest about this and why do pattern companies use this detail without letting the fabirc departments know about them so that they could supply us?

JUDY

DEAR JUDY,

Trying to keep up with the g a d g e t s that are sometimes used on patterns is quite a task. Perhaps if the pattern companout letting the fabric departments know in advance about what they will be featuring, everyone would be happier.

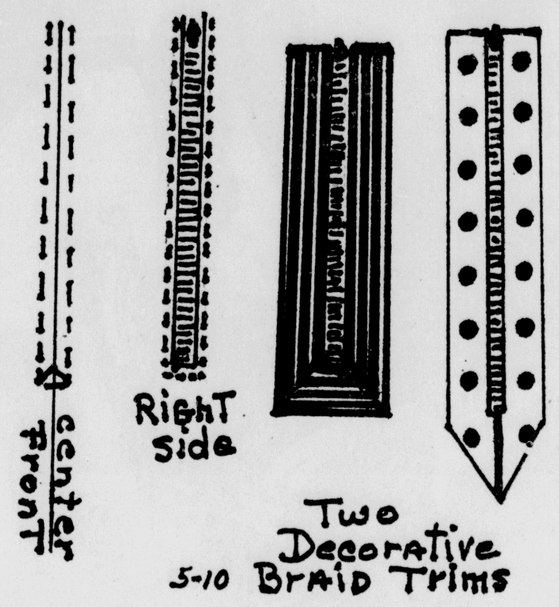

I will suggest you use a conventional zipper and then use a decorative braid or ribbon as a trim around the zipper and you will have a very attractive, original closing with the appearance of the clunky type detail.

You will want the zipper to be exposed, not covered. This will require you to machine stitch a little more than ⅛ inch each side of the center front line and straight across the lower end according to the length of zipper you will use. Cut down the center, between the two stitching lines and clip to each corner, turn the edges under and pin this fold to the top, or right side of the zipper. Machine stitch in place before planning the trim you will use around the zipper. Miter the corners of the trim for a neat finish.

MRS. ANNE B o e c l e r, St. Louis, Mo. wins the Tailor Trix pressing board this week for her suggestion as follows:

"Last year I made a suit with a high, stand-up, mandarin-type collar which although properly interfaced, did not hold its stand-up shape. It had waves and ripples and the front points did not behave as I, a perfec t i o n i s t in sewing, felt they should.

"Since the suit could use a little color contrast and this is such a scarf year, I threaded a long scarf through the bias collar and let it extend at each end. It filled in the bias collar, gave i t a well-rounded shape and the scarf adds just the right touch, tied at the center front. I intend to use my 'mistake' again on other garments because I love the new look I achieved."

DEAR EUNICE,

I just completed a silk cocktail dress and trimmed it with some beautiful jewel trimming. I sewed it on very carefully but, when it was finished, the dress looked pulled and actually gathered under the trim. What other method could have been used?

MRS. J.P.P

DEAR MRS. J.P.P.:

Several factors could have caused this and I shall mention two of them since I haven't actually seen your dress. First, it is possible that the trimming wasn't flexible enough to go around a curved area and it might also have been too heavy for the weight of your dress. There are so many different types of jeweled trimming that are available, be sure to check these points out before making a purchase.

Another important point to remembers is this: even if the trimming is completely flexible, you must pin and baste the outer edge smoothly in place first. After this is finished, you will notice the inner edge which will be closest to the neckline of your garment will look slightly full; this can be eased in as you sew it in position. Many women have found that if they run a hand basting with a small stitch around this inner edge it makes it much e a s i e r to position smoothly.

If you were to work with the inner edge first, there wouldn't be enough of the trim to fit the larger area and this of course could cause the puckering. Never sew any kind of trim on with tiny tight stitches. Always work with a looser thread to avoid that nailed-down look.

DEAR EUNICE,

Whenever I try to let an old hem down, the lower edge looks bulgy instead of smooth. How can I avoid this since it looks as if all of us will be letting down our hems in the near future?

MRS. P.P.

DEAR MRS. P.P.:

Your problem probably started long before you tried to let the hem down. Most women really don't know how to press properly and they invariably press in long sweeping strokes like they use when they are doing the family ironing. This can completely distort any part of a garment.

Carefully place your hem on the ironing board and if it looks stretched out of shape, ease it gently and press it back into shape by using an up-and-down movement with the iron, not a sliding movement. All pressing should be done on the wrong side of the fabric and usually a steam iron is recommended. If the crease line is stubborn to remove, try dampening it was vinegar and water or with seltzer water (not sweet soda).

Most frequently asked questions on such problems as darts, yardage to buy, pleats and slot seams are answered in the booklet, "Twenty Questions." Get the booklet to answer some of your sewing problems by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Artichoke Sauce

Wine and mushroom sauce makes an unusual dip for hot artichokes. The recipe makes enough sauce for 6 artichokes, cooked in 2 to 3 inches of boiling water 35 to 45 minutes, or until bases can be pierced easily with a fork. Add ¼ teaspoon of salt for each artichoke. The sauce: blend in a saucepan one 10½-ounce can of undiluted cream of mushroom soup, ¼ cup of dry white wine, ¼ teaspoon of thyme leaves, crushed, and a dash each of nutmeg and coarsely ground pepper. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly.

Exhibit Traces Women's Struggle

By HELEN THOMAS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is nothing new about the women's liberation movement.

To hear the Smithsonian Institution in Washington tell it, feminist mobilization dates back to Abigail Adams and longer. The Smithsonian opened an exhibit this week titled "Women in Politics" that traces the struggle for women's rights, still unfulfilled.

The display, which lasts until July, also commemorates 1970 as the 50th anniversary of women's suffrage. The items in the show range from needlework (woman's place is in the home) as well as copies of "The Revolution," a radical periodical on the women's movement begun in 1968.

MUCH OF THE show is devoted to portraits and memorabilia of the women who led the fight. Many of them wound up in jail.

A feminist in the colonial era, Mrs. John Adams wrote to her husband while he was serving in the Continental Congress, that "In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power in the hands of the husbands. Remember all men would be tyrants if they could. If particular care is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice or representation."

And while some may tell women today, "You've come a long way baby," the females hardly think so. On Capitol hill this week, women leaders are pushing for the "equal rights for women" amendment which has been introduced in every session of Congress for the last 46 years.

The opposition has always contended women would lose special privileges and benefits guaranteed under the law if the amendment is adopted.

BUT FEMINIST leaders — among others, Rep. Shirley Chisholm, (D.-N.Y.) says women are ready to sacrifice these so-called benefits for equality. Men and women need "fair play, protection and job security" equally, she says.

Mrs. Chisolm also told Congress that as a "black woman" she has been discriminated against more often "because I am a woman than because I am black."

Pre-dating Mrs. Chisolm and the women's lib are the Smithsonian profiles on two women who aspired to the presidency, Victoria Woodhull and Belva A. Lockwood, the first female to practice before the Supreme Court.

The stories of Sarah and Angelina Grimke and Sojourner Truth, noted anti-slavery lecturers, also are told.

A PROMINENT place in the exhibit also is held by three vigorous campaigners for equal rights in past history, Lucretia Mott, Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton.

The final section of the show is subtitled "An Unfulfilled Dream."

The exhibit concludes that "after more than a century of agitation the situation of the American woman remains ambiguous. She has made great strides in achieving an education, obtaining job opportunities and receiving reasonable treatment under the law. She has not attained equality, for her gains have not kept pace with those of men."

Bride Styles

A favorite style for 1970's brides is also traditional—the high-rising Empire waistline. Penny Clark, showroom manager for one of the volume manufacturers, Alfred Angelo, says brides cling to high necklines still, with long, soft sleeves, and a chapel length train. The floor-sweeping cathedral length is not as popular as it was a few years ago.

The 'First Lady' Of Medicine

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Roberta Fenlon, who as the first woman president of the California Medical Association is the highest ranking American woman in organized medicine, counts the achievement as only one of many times of being "the first woman."

"So many girls fail to go into professional fields because they're afraid they can't make it," said Dr. Fenlon.

"I think anything any of us happen to achieve can be a great inspiration for young women."

Dr. Fenlon achieved her present status in the medical world over the objections of her father, also a doctor, who disapproved of women in medicine.

But she persevered and was graduated from the University of Iowa Medical School, served her internship at San Francisco General Hospital and her residency at the University of California Medical School.

She entered private practice in internal medicine in San Francisco in 1945.

In 1960, Dr. Fenlon became the first woman president of the San Francisco Medical Society and the following year was chosen Medical Woman of the year by the American Medical Woman's Association.

In 1964, she was the first woman elected to the council of the California Medical Association and the first woman to chair local convention arrangements for the American Medical Association.

Dr. Fenlon said she wasn't surprised about policiy decisions made at the last CMA convention. One included advocating health insurance for all persons and lifting all restrictions on abortions.

"Medicine didn't raise its voice about anything in the past, but we've been working on these things right along," she said.

"I think a woman has the right to decide if she wants a child. The way our proposal is worded, people have a choice. It doesn't mean that anybody has to have an abortion—it's up to each individual."

Dr. Fenlon explained that the CMA has been involved in health insurance plans for more than 30 years and started California Blue Shield in 1939.

"When I think of what we had 30 years ago and what we have now," she said. "I think around 80 per cent of the people are covered now.

"The question now is how best to implement our proposal so that everybody gets the same kind of medical care.

"People on welfare are afraid that doctors won't take care of them."

Claim With Ring

Man appears to have claimed his bride from earliest times with a ring. It may have been a rope tied around her waist —a more direct means of wooing his favorite —but the sentiment to claim and then to protect and guard always has been there.

DISTRICT FERRY — This is the Point Loma, which the Golden Gate Bridge District hopes to put into Sausalito-San Francisco service in July. The second deck will be enclosed and a third deck added.

Span Board Presses Ferry Work, Seeks Commute Charter Bus Bids

Resumption of San Francisco Bay ferry service by the Golden Gate Bridge district moved closer yesterday with several actions by district directors.

The district, which operated Tiburon-San Francisco service when Harbor Tours was strikebound, hopes to launch service to Sausalito by July 1.

In a series of moves, directors called for bids May 29 for approximately $80,000 in modifications to the district's new ferryboat, the Point Loma, and for construction of a temporary landing facility for the vessel near the old ferry slip in Salsalito.

The board also approved hiring Walter Landor and Associates at a maximum of $55,000 to work out a marketing scheme for the district's burgeoning transit operations. That step was taken despite calls by at least two directors to seek a less expensive contract with some other firm.

CHARTER BUS BIDS

In other transit business, directors voted their intention to provide cross-bay commuters with immediate bus service, pending purchase of their own equipment. They called for bids to provide up to 80 charter buses to district-subsidized commuter clubs.

Modifications to the Point Loma will include enclosing the second deck, adding a third deck and installing radar. The work will increase the vessel's capacity from 500 to 582 passengers.

The Point Loma, purchased last month at a cost of nearly $560,000, arrived in San Francisco Bay yesterday.

The temporary docking facility, of the float-type, will be located near the old ferryboat Berkeley and is estimated to cost $45,000. District officials are still negotiating a lease of the property.

The ferry actions brought objections from several directors that the district was acting hastily and leaving itself open to public criticism for spending large sums too quickly.

SPEED URGED

But director Peter Tamaras said, "Time is of the essence. We want to get the ferryboat on the bay."

"We're not used to moving around here," added director Stephen C. Leonoudakis, "and when we start to move, someone interprets it as panic."

Director Joseph E. Sheeks of Belvedere, cochairman of the joint transportation and finance-auditing committee, objected he had been notified too late of a meeting Thursday of his group at which the ferry matters were raised, but Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring said it was an administrative mistake.

Sheeks said there should be more time between committee and board meetings to enable public discussion and greater consideration of matters by directors.

The Golden Gate Bridge District board also:

AUDITOR — Referred back to finance-auditing committee the selection an accounting firm to audit the 1969-70 books after directors could not decide on a firm.

WAGES — Approved wage increases of 25-75 cents for maintenance and crafts personnel as contained in union contracts.

LOAN — Formally authorized repayment of a $5.8 million loan from the state for construction of the Waldo Tunnel.

Union Leaders Talk Of Countrywide Stoppage

The president of Local 21 of the San Francisco Typographical Workers Union said last night that a general Marin County work stoppage might be the solution needed to resolve the four-month strike at the Independent-Journal newspaper.

Leon Olson told about 75 persons gathered at Civic Center that a general labor strike "could end this" but added that it was not easily attained because of the large number of persons involved.

Olson spoke at a two-hour forum on the strike sponsored by the Marin Coalition, a faction of labor, education, church and rights organizations, and 14 other groups.

The forum was originally conceived as a two-sided debate and airing of the strike issues but the Independent-Journal declined to send a speaker, saying that "no useful purpose can be served by debating the issues other than at the bargaining table."

Charles B. Weers, secretary of the Marin County Labor Council, supported Olson's hints of a general strike, saying that the entire labor movement in the Bay Area supported the typographical union.

Weers also told the audience that he had "been informed" that the strike at the Independent-Journal stemmed from an effort by newspaper management statewide to destroy the printers' union. "It was the spot picked to break the dike," he said.

Olson said the I-J "takes refuge" in the fact that it has a "monopoly" in Marin County.

Olson said the only real issue in the strike was the newspaper's attempt to break the union.

"This was brought home clearly on April 24," Olson said "when the paper brought forth a new proposal which called for three-fourths of the employees to take a $42 cut in pay."

Olson said the printers' local had agreed to negotiate on the "bogus type" issue, but expected to receive something in return if this was stricken from the contract. "Bogus type" is type set by printers knowing it will never be used in the paper.

Olson said that the "bogus type" and discharge issues are merely a "smoke screen" for the real issue, the breaking of the union.

The majority of the audience supported the union during an hour-long question and answer period. Speakers from the audience condemned the newspaper for making strike preparations long before the walkout started, for seeking to eliminate the apprentice program and for seeking to lay blame for broken windows of businessmen on the union.

On the issue of violence, Olson, in answer to a question, admitted that incidents such as the Valentine's Day riot "don't reflect well on the union." He said he felt that the term "vandalism" rather than "violence" more adequately summed up union actions at the demonstration.

David Jenkins, who identified himself as a longshoreman, said he felt the union people had been "quite restrained" in the strike, noting that during a longshoreman's strike several years ago college youths who worked as strikebreakers on the docks were "thrown into the bay."

Marin's Census To Be Finished By End Of May

Census enumeration in Marin County will not be completed until the end of May.

Barbara K. Hennessey, district manager of the Bureau of the Census, said her San Rafael office will close at that time.

All forms that were due April 1 have been collected. "Our enumerators are not out collecting questionnaires at all," she said. "They are getting things corrected."

Figures could be released at the end of May if the Bureau of Census in Washington so authorizes but, she said, it probably won't.

The entire population count will be announced in Washington on Dec. 1, she said.

Russian River Dredge Delay Urged By State

OAKLAND (AP) — A plan to protect the environment at Asilomar State Conference Grounds at Pacific Grove was adopted here Friday by the State Park and Recreation Commission.

The plan would reduce the allowable number of people using the grounds to 900 per day and dormitory facilities to 500 beds from the present 645. The nonprofit corporation which operates the facilities was instructed to give priority to construction of an underground parking garage.

JENNER REQUEST

Meeting here, the commission also voted to ask the Sonoma County board of supervisors to defer final action on a controversial permit for a giant dredging project at the mouth of the Russian River. The board said it wants its own staff report on the project, which has been tenatively approved by the supervisors and was expected to get final approval before the end of this month.

In other action on the North Coast, the commission approved immediate master planning for creation of a Mendocino Headlands State Park under a plan much scaled down from an earlier proposal to convert the whole coast between Van Damme and Russian Gulch State Parks.

FUNDS NEEDED

The reduced plan would spend $1,042,000 for land — requiring legislative appropriation — that would include 205 acres of headlands at the town of Mendocino, 12,000 feet of ocean frontage and 8,000 feet along Big River.

The commission also opposed construction of any dam along Pescadero Creek in San Mateo County that would flood any portion of Portola State Park, disturb the creek or otherwise damage the environment.

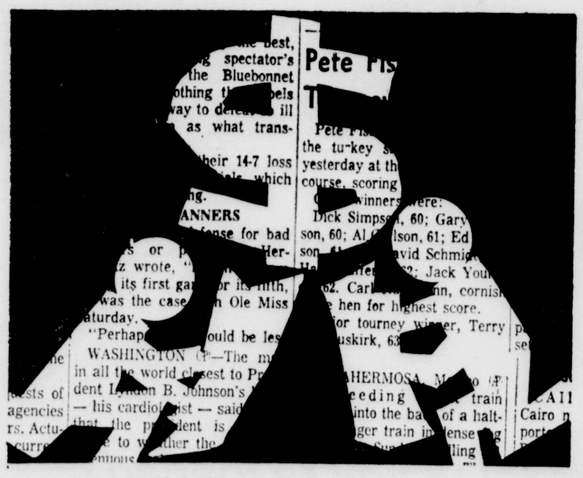

Finally, the commission gave its approval to Proposition 7, which would allow more than the present legal limit of 5 per cent interest on bond issues.

To Juvenile Court

The case of Walter David Watson, 18, of San Rafael, has been transferred to Marin Juvenile Court. He is accused of auto burglary in San Rafael on April 22 along with another youth, Gerald Arthur Beaudoin, 18, of Corte Madera, whose case is awaiting trial in Marin Superior Court.

STAGE REVIEW

'Annie' Conquers Novato Audience

By THERON A. NEWELL

Irving Berlin's "Annie Get Your Gun," presented by the Novato Community Players, opened a big hit last night to a capacity crowd at the Novato Community House.

With a cast of more than 60, the musical was by far the most ambitious production of the Novato Community Players and kept the audience's attention throughout the three and a half hours.

Sally McGillis, in her first starring performance with the players, stole the show with her portrayal of Annie Oakley, the crack shot from the backwoods who became a world celebrity in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show.

Max Keeler, whose singing has pleased many past audiences, gave one of his best performances as Frank Butler, Annie's rival and lover.

Donald McGillis as Charlie Davenport, Dawn Scheiern as Dolly Tate and Scott Wright as Sitting Bull also deserve mention in major supporting roles. The performance of Roy Mathias as the colorful Buffalo Bill left something to be desired for failing to project the image of that showman.

The costumes, lighting, stage setting and sound were some of the best ever put on by the club.

There is a rule of thumb on Broadway that a show cannot run too long, however, three and a half hours was almost too much of a good thing.

The opening dance number was far too long and should be shortened. Berlin's music was not meant to be played slowly and the dancers could have shortened the number by half if the tempo had been kept as originally written.

It was not until "Doing What Comes Naturally" that the show came alive. This was a risque number in its day, but with theaters full of such things as "Oh Calcutta" it seems mild, although it was once banned from the air.

That was followed by a very good rendition of "The Girl That I Marry" and "You Can't Get a Man With a Gun."

Other "Annie" melodies which always bring a response from the audience are, "There's No Business Like Show Business," "They Say That It's Wonderful," "I'm an Indian, Too," "I Got the Sun in the Morning," and "Anything You Can Do."

The musical will be presented again at 8:30 p.m. today, May 15 and 16 and 22 and 23.

Marriage ceremonies have changed with the times. For example, French bridegrooms tossed away garters. Today a bouquet is tossed away and the recipient is considered a prime potential next bride.

Moon's Passage Provides A Key To Location Of Most Planets

By SHERMAN WALKER

The moon passed a degrees north of Mars on Thursday. The easiest way to identify the planet seems to be by giving the time when the moon passes it. Even if they are not above the horizon at time of closed passage, they will still be close together a few hours later when they can be seen.

Mercury will be in inferior conjunction tonight. This means that it will be in the part of its orbit that is between earth and sun. It can be seen, with suitable equipment, as a tiny dot crossing the face of the sun. It can be seen from Europe, Asia, Africa and South America but not from the United States, except in the extreme eastern part.

Also tonight there will be a very close conjunction of two planets, Venus and Mars. They will be only two-tenths of a degree apart at closest passage. They can't be seen at that time but will be quite close together when they are visible.

The moon reaches the most distant part of its orbit—apogee—on Tuesdayand starts it first-quarter phase on Wednesday.

Uranus, a planet that cannot easily be seen without optical aid, is passed by the moon on May 16. The moon will be south of Uranus.

The moon is full on May 20 and is in the closest part of its orbit—perigee—on May 25. It starts its last-quarter phase on May 27. The moon is new on June 3, and on June 6 Venus and the crescent moon will be beautiful in the evening sky.

School Tax Problem: Keeping Up With Inflation

Five school district tax measures will be before voters in various parts of Marin County on June 2 primary ballots.

San Rafael High School District is asking its voters to raise the ceiling on its general operating tax rate (the part which is under voter control) from $1.75 to $2.05 per $100 assessed valuation. San Rafael Elementary School District seeks a similar raise in its limit, from $2.25 to $2.65. Ross School District wants permission for an increase from $2.70 to $3.70; Reed School District, from $2.25 to $2.85; Lagunitas School District, from $2.65 to $3.55.

This means about one of every four school districts in the county seeks a tax limit increase on this election day. Still others have already had such elections. And one, Novato, has scheduled another for July.

FOR MANY YEARS, appeals for increases in school district taxes have been based, at least in part, on growing school population. More children have demanded more schools, more teachers. Increase in assessed valuation usually has lagged behind increase in school population.

This year, however, there is no increase in pupils in most of the districts. Why, then, are so many asking tax increases?

The reason is, quite simply, inflation.

THIS IS THE WHOLE explanation for the two San Rafael issues.

San Rafael Elementary and High School Districts have been in comparatively prosperous situations. They have been able to spend, if not lavishly, at least what their educators consider adequately, and still wind up each year with a respectable balance in the bank.

But inflation has caught up.

According to the citizen finance committee whose investigation preceded the call for the tax election, both districts must have more money than their present tax rates will raise, in order to maintain present programs. The school administration has said an additional 17 cents will be needed on the elementary school district rate and 20.7 cents on the high school rate. The 30 and 40-cent increase are predicated on further inflation in the following two years.

THE CASE UNDOUBTEDLY is similar in the other districts. While the liberality or stinginess of past spending practices varies from district to district, all are faced with the sad fact that the cost of everything for which they must pay has been rising rapidly and continues to rise. And so, in order to keep spending on the same scale, and providing the same services, they must ask for higher taxes.

Boiled down to essentials, then, the question before the voters is this: Do you want your schools to keep up with inflation?

The Trouble With Ladybugs

Ladybugs are great for controlling aphids. Aphids are broiled steak and strawberry shortcake to the ladybugs. Like many another gardener, we ordered several thousands of the little orange and black creatures to try some pesticide-free gardening.

They seemed to disappear immediately after they were released at night in the garden. It seems that only a few thought enough of our booming crop of aphids to stick around and enjoy them.

A recent article about ladybugs in National Geographic Magazine reveals that ours were not unique. Ladybugs, it seems, would rather fly than eat. About 90 per cent of newly released ladybugs move on almost immediately. Often they are not hungry. And many entomologists question whether the practice of letting them loose in a garden really does any good.

Well, win one, lose one.

Thermal Pollution

The water required to cool a nuclear reactor becomes "thermal pollution" when it is dumped, very hot, into the ocean. Naturally, it upsets the balance and ecology of the region.

But is seems downright wasteful to dump hot water. For example, in Iceland hot water from natural springs is used to heat houses. It has been suggested that bananas could be grown on a commercial scale in hot houses in Vermont by using the heated water from a reactor. Or thousands of tons of vegetables.

Perhaps one day we will regard the manufacture of electricity to be a happy by-product of nuclear reactors, whose main job will to heat water for some as yet undreamed-of use.

Surely man is more resourceful than to just dump a good source of energy.

Bouquets And Brickbats

BOUQUETS to William G. Corrigan and Roderick P. Martinelli on their poll of lawyers practicing in Marin for ratings of candidates for Marin Municipal Court judge. This approach — giving the public the benefit of the bar's opinion without any attempt to dictate who shall run for judge — appears to us both proper and commendable.

BRICKBATS to three Democrats — Roger Kent, Nancy Swadesh and S. Robert Politzer — who are attempting to make a political issue out of a labor dispute, and one of which they obviously know little, to boot, i.e., the strike of San Francisco Typographical Union 21 against the Independent-Journal.

Men Of Cloth Confusing Roles

Re Agnes J. Roderick's letter April 3:

"I am adamant in my belief that the functions of the church and state should be separate." So do I, definitely! That is why I get so angry when I see so many of the men of the cloth, demonstrating, marching and appearing on TV with the sole purpose of trying to tell the state how to run its business. First of all they should ask themselves, just how good have I done my job.

Paper Pickup Needed In Marin

Recycling has been shown to be feasible and practical. I feel, therefore, as in San Francisco the Marin Disposal Service should show its interest by participating in the newspaper pickup program. Their response to my inquiry was that they had no plans at all to begin collecting bundled newspapers. I urge the I-J and the public to exert pressure to get this started.

Judges' Role Not Confined To Crime

This is in response to the letter appearing in your newspaper of April 24 signed by Clifford S. Lund as well as with regard to other issues pertaining to the June 2 primary election for judge of the Municipal Court, Central Judicial District.

Mr. Lund, is his letter, fails to make mention of the fact that he is campaign chairman for Ernest Zunino. He further fails to point out that all of the judges, to whom he refers in his letter, had extensive experience in civil litigation as well as representing individuals charged with crimes, prior to their assuming the bench.

It should be pointed out that the duties of a municipal court judge cover a myriad of legal matters other than criminal in nature. Generally speaking, the municipal court handles all civil matters in which $5,000 or less if involved. . .

It is extremely unfortunate that some of the candidates for municipal court judge have decided to focus their campaign almost exclusively on the issue of "law and order". This theme has been so used and abused by politicians as to have become meaningless and lends nothing to the issues in this election. . .

Candidates Ignore Law, Exposure

Thanks to the I-J for its story last week pointing out the illegal posting of political signs around Marin. You would think that having been caught with their hands in the cookie jar the candidates would silently fold up their illegal signs in the night and steal away with them. But, instead many new signs have been posted, including some by judge candidates who may, if elected, be called upon to enforce the very law they are violating. Tut! tut!

Apollo 13 Proves Anew: Problems Make The Man

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

You've got to have problems to be human, to keep life from becoming a bore. This was proven again in outer space.

When Apollo 13 zoomed through space after a perfect liftoff, effortlessly gliding toward a landing on the moon, few paid any attention. A newspaper in Milan, Italy, summed up the mood in a headline: "Too Perfect; The Public Is Getting Bored."

Then things happened. And the public no longer remained bored. After three days in space, plus 206,000 miles from earth, with Apollo's crew "wishing everyone there a nice evening," it suddenly happened. Bang . . . "Hey," crackled out a voice sharply from space, "we've got a problem here." It was the voice of Jack Sweigert at Apollo 13's controls.

IT WAS A CRY of alarm from three men, in the black void of outer space, who instead of landing in the Sea of Serenity on the moon, were in peril of becoming weightlessly trapped with their spaceship a sarcophagus, indefinitely entombed in space orbit.

This was — to use space-age understatement — a problem. And when you have a problem, man's humanity ceases to be bored. The prospect of a death no man ever did — death in space, cold, alone, merging with the primeval dust of stars, was shockingly unthinkable.

The problem humanizes man. The space problem humanized the space program. It was as if the huge expensive machine and its mission didn't matter any longer. What mattered was bringing home safely three earthlings.

THE PRECIOUS moon dust, stilled for several billion years in airless moonscape; will still be there for another several billion years.

Vulnerable men cannot wait. Their survival depends upon a life-support system that seemed to be running out of breatheable air, water, power and supplies. And the ship of space was yet to traverse a weightless ocean of void more than 200,000 miles deep, to reach the promised earth.

This was perhaps the greatest exodus for the smallest number of people — three in a black and abyssmal sea — with a rescue operation engaging the whole world; with the massive solidarity of humanity united in prayer and in a desire to help; with thousands of men in active participation in the actual rescue work.

And it was proven once again, even against the odds of a hostile universe in which the astronauts were floating, that man's will and ingenuity and persistence in the face of challenge is beyond imagination.

Give men a smoothly operating spaceship, plodding into a pathless void toward another world, and they get weary.

SHOW MEN a crippled spaceship, with a waning life-support system and faltering hope to make it back home, and you get them excited. And excited men begin to care, as they have never cared before, and become noble as they were never noble before. When they are threatened, they act. And when they act they see their finest hour.

Once again, in astronomical dimensions, man's resiliency in the face of failure was proven. Apollo's triumphant return to earth dramatized the universal truth that given enough determination, guts and united effort, the failure of the machine need not be fatal, if man is at the controls, to save himself and his element. Three men in Apollo 13 failed to land on the moon, but they did land safely on earth. And with them, for a few fleeting precious moments, all mankind landed empathically, gloriously, triumphantly.

Nixon's Invasion Of Cambodia Plays Into Hands Of Kremlin

WASHINGTON — In his highly emotional performance announcing the invasion of Cambodia, President Nixon touched only glancingly on the peril of greater Russian-Chinese involvement. He chose to gloss over the dangers in deepening divisiveness here at home.

This last was made manifest on Capitol Hill and on the college campuses hardly before the sound of his words died away. It is a storm that will gain momentum as the weeks pass in what seems almost certain to be still another prolonged and, finally, futile "search and destroy" pursuit of an enemy as elusive as the shadows in the jungle.

SERIOUS as is this divisiveness, it pales alongside the peril of a confrontation with the other super powers at the brink of the nuclear abyss.

Rivals for leadership of the Communist bloc, Russia and China must compete in adventurism and in hostility toward the "imperialist powers." Premier Alexei Kosygin's denunciation of the Cambodian invasion in a rare personal-appearance press conference is the first warning signal.

IN WESTERN EUROPE one of the ablest young leaders with full access to intelligence reports puts primary stress on this Russian-Chinese rivalry as an obstacle to stability and peace.

In his appraisal Moscow has no motive to bring about any abatement of the Indochina war. On the contrary, while it continues China must in spite of a primitive and strained economy supply material help to Hanoi.

But neither is Moscow a confident giant. In the balance between war and peace a classical element has always been internal weekness and unrest. Foreign adventurism and a threatening enemy are a convenient means for enforcing unity.

SERIOUS ECONOMIC troubles plague the Soviet Union — a shortage of consumer goods, bottlenecks and snafus in production, the ills of a moribund bureaucracy. These accentuate the rivalries for power in the Kremlin. The speculation — and it is entirely conjecture as a facade of total secrecy screens that iron fastness — has put Leonid I. Brezhnev, the Communist Party boss, in the ascendancy with the hardliners on the military side.

It may, therefore, be significant that Kosygin surfaced, the first time a Russian premier made such a move since Nikita Khrushchev in 1960, with an attack on President Nixon and a promise to align other powers against the United States in Indochina.

WHAT IS FAR less well known is the external weakness of the Soviet Union. Far from being an answer to the unrest in the eastern bloc, the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia in August of 1968 and the purging of Alexander Dubcek and his liberalizing regime fed the deep discontent and distrust in the satellite capitals.

Janos Kadar of Hungary is both more subtle and more cautious than Dubcek in frustrating the dictates of Moscow. Rumania's Communist Party general secretary Nicolae Ceausescu openly defies the Kremlin. In February, 1969, with the Prague assualt still an open wound, he met with Yugoslav President Tito. An official announcement after the meeting said the two had reaffirmed the principles of sovereignty and noninterference by one power in the affairs of another power.

The dissidents are confident for one good and simple reason. They are convinced Moscow cannot afford another Prague. It would shatter the remaining pretense of unity on the eve of the conclave of Communist nations the Kremlin has called for the fall.

THE EASTERN bloc powers want to cooperate in a variety of ways with Western Europe. They would especially like to get capital and technical assistance, with Dubcek socialism as their goal. Their restlessness is a constant concern for Moscow.

Now by his newest wary, President Nixon has given the Russians a chance to whip up the hostility of the satellites. With restraint and a show of quiet strength he could have helped to hold the balance for what he professes to want — negotiation and not confrontation. Instead he has taken a perilous gamble that is in itself a confession of weakness.

ART BUCHWALD

How Attorney General Mitchell Insured Nixon's Job In Advance

WASHINGTON — No one who has followed the events of the past two weeks can have anything but admiration for the political sagacity of Atty. Gen. John Mitchell.

Mitchell's astuteness as a king-maker goes back to Miami Beach, Fla., where he engineered the nomination of Richard M. Nixon as the Republican candidate for President of the United States. But it did not end there. In one of the smoke-filled rooms that you always read about, Mitchell, puffing on his pipe, discussed some of the problems Mr. Nixon would have to face if he were elected to the presidency.

"ONE OF THE THINGS we can't overlook," Mitchell said, "is that the people might want to impeach you, Dick, at some time early in your term."

"I haven't even been elected yet, and you're already talking about my impeachment," Mr. Nixon protested.

"We have to prepare for every contingency," Mitchell said. "Suppose you decide to widen the war in Indochina?"

"But I've promised to end the war in Vietnam and bring our boys home."

"WE KNOW what you've promised, Dick. But you may wish at some stage to go into Cambodia or Laos."

"Why that's ridiculous. Why would I do that?" Mr. Nixon asked.

"Perhaps to clean out the Communist sanctuaries once and for all."

"But if I did that," Mr. Nixon said, "they'd have to impeach me."

"Precisely what I said," Mitchell said.

"I DON'T WANT to be impeached," Mr. Nixon cried. "Not after all the work I put in to get the nomination."

"You don't have to be, Dick. We have to make it impossible for them to take your job away."

"How do you do that?"

"We have to select a vice president that the public will be so frightened of that they wouldn't dare impeach you."

"I never thought of that," Mr. Nixon admitted. "The best insurance a President could have would be to have someone standing in the wings that nobody could accept for the office. Who fits the description?"

THE ATTRONEY GENERAL took out a list. "We have a few people here that might fill the role. Strom Thurmond, Governor Reagan of California, Carl McIntyre of the Christian Anti-Communist Crusade, J. Edgar Hoover, and that guy from Maryland . . . what's-his-name?"

"What do you mean what's-his-name?"

"I have it somehwere. Here it is. Spiro Agnew."

"You have to be kidding. Whoever heard of Spiro Agnew?"

"That's not the point. With television we can make him into a household name overnight. The question is, can he produce enough fear in the American electorate to keep it from impeaching you?"

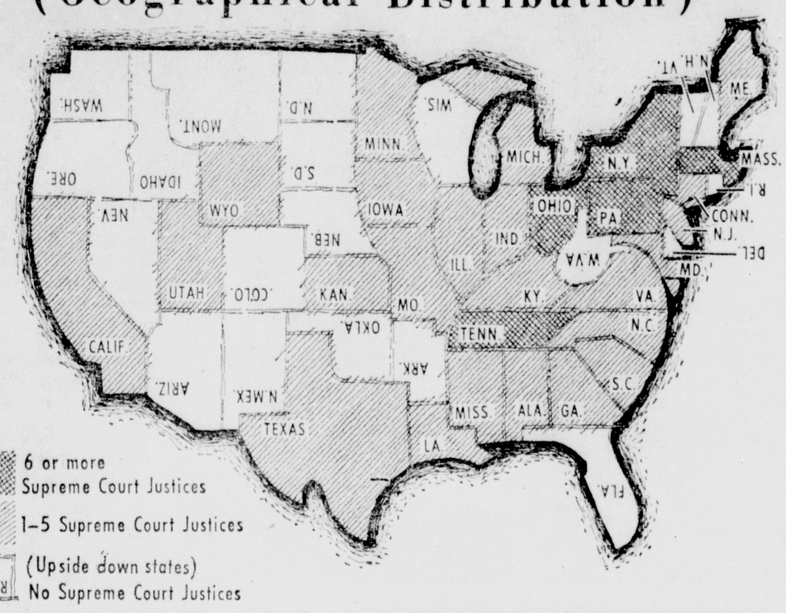

"HOW DO WE know that?" Mr. Nixon asked.

"We don't know it," Mitchell replied. "But we've been talking to the guy, and he sounds like someones who can really ruffle people's features. If we send him out to fund-raising dinners for a year and give him enough exposure, and let him say what he wants, no one in this country would dare impeach you."

As everyone knows, Mr. Nixon bought the idea, and last week when all the impeachment talk concerning President Nixon started, Attorney General Mitchell was the smuggest man in Washington. He called up the President and chuckled:

"That's another favor you owe me."

Muskie, McGovern Looking To '72

Behind The News

Saturday, May 9, 1970 Independent-Journal, 19

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two springs before the 1972 presidential primary season, Sens. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and George S. McGovern of South Dakota are taking the first, important steps likely to lead to races for the presidency.

In a sense, the two Democratic senators have been campaigning ever since 1968, crisscrossing the country, making speeches designed to keep them in the public eye and helping fellow Democrats in the manner used by John Kennedy and Richard Nixon to lay the base for their presidential bids.

Now, they are beginning to take more definite steps—though any decision is still at least 18 months away.

Muskie has set up a separate research office, ostensibly for his Senate campaign likely to result in a landslide victory this fall. He has started to draw on a series of issue-oriented task forces. He is beginning to gather tapes and films of his activities, and has started to break in "advance men" for his out-of-town appearances.

McGovern, like Muskie a frequent speaker for his two dozen colleagues seeking reelection this fall, has raised $300,000 for their campaigns. He is realigning his staff and plans to hire key political and media operatives. And he is laying the first, tentative outlines of a national political organization for his presidential bid.

Muskie, the 1968 vice presidential nominee, is widely regarded by politicians as the early front-runner. As for McGovern, who made a brief unsuccessful presidential bid in 1968 following Robert F. Kennedy's assassination, even some of his own backers have doubts about how far he can go.

OTHERS IN FIELD

Muskie and McGovern, while the furthest advanced towards a presidential race, are not alone as Democratic hopefuls. Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, the 1968 nominee, is expected to try again if he is successful in regaining a Minnesota Senate seat this November.

But many politicians who supported Humphrey in 1968 tell reporters privately they hope he won't try in 1972, feeling he has little chance.

Other hopefuls in the Senate include Sens. Birch E. Bayh of Indana, who has stepped up his national speaking activities after leading the successful fights against President Nixon's two Supreme Court nominees; Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma, who resigned as the party's national chairman to speak out more on national issues; and Sen. Harold E. Hughes of Iowa, mentioned as a dark horse possibility.

Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, who is retiring from the Senate this year, has dropped hints in recent months he may undertake a second try for the presidency in 1972.

KENNEDY FUTURE

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts insists he will serve out the six-year Senate term to which he seeks election this fall, although National Chairman Lawrence F. O'Brien says he must be considered among potential 1972 nominees.

Neither Muskie, 56, nor McGovern, 47, denies he is considering a 1972 race.

"It's the kind of challenge that obviously I'm thinking about," Muskie said in a recent interview. "The impulses that took me into public life in the first place are moving me in the direction of making that challenge, given the proper circumstances."

"My own view," McGovern said in a separate interview, "remains that my role can best be served by addressing myself bluntly to the issues." Asked recently in Salt Lake City about 1972, he replied "I'm interested in national politics and have been for years. But I'm going to reserve any judgment about a candidacy for 1972."

POLLS EYED

Neither senator puts much stock in public opinion polls which currently show that Humphrey, Muskie and Kennedy each command about 25 per cent with McCarthy, McGovern and the others far behind.

Despite his low standing in polls, McGovern feels he is making progress towards a presidential candidacy. "I think that the response every place I have been has been very strong, very good," he said. "I think there is a base being built there all the time."

Muskie said "I always have a feeling I've made more friends. I guess that's the low-keyed, Down East way of evaluating the results."

Muskie has made many of his appearances at formal party functions, especially in states where Democratic senators are running this fall. These appearances will give him valuable IOUs for 1972.

McGovern, too, is in the debt of many of these senators. He lent his name to a fund-raising appeal which so far has brought in $300,000 for liberal Democratic senators running this year.

Both senators spoke last month at the Western States Democratic meeting at Salt Lake City. McGovern to a luncheon of about 400, Muskie to a $25-a-plate Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner that attracted three times that many in the evening.

Afterwards, many persons who attended both session said McGovern made a better showing. Yet, many who said this went on to rate Muskie as the front-runner for the 1972 nomination.

"Most of the people there throught both were great," said Mrs. Jean Westwood, Utah's Democratic national committeewoman. But she conceded that McGovern's speech "did go over much better. It was a much better speech."

Wyoming National Committeeman Teno Roncalio, a veteran Kennedy man, said "I'm very much impressed with George McGovern. I admire his guts."

But asked if he thought the McGovern candidacy is going anywhere, he replied "Probably not."

In evaluating why Muskie would be rated the front-runner in that part of the country Mrs. Westwood said "McGovern still suffers from a residue of handicaps from 1968. Many people out here still feel he is a stalking horse for the Kennedys."

MUSKIE EDGE

If the two enter a 1972 presidential contest, Muskie will start out with the initial advantage of strong organization support from party regulars in many states, including the South whose support was so important to Humphrey in 1968.

POLAR BEARS STAY CLEAN

Britain's Antismog War Finally Gaining Ground

By TORONTO TELEGRAM NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — They no longer have to scrub the polar bears at London Zoo with strong detergents every week.

That's one of the most striking proofs that Britain's clean-air program is finally working.

A poisonous and ugly pall of black smog that used to be London's stigma has largely disappeared.

They're sandblasting noble old buildings that have been black for nearly a century.

And with all this cleaning going on, many residents of the world's third-largest city are now becoming increasingly concerned about invisible pollutants: Sulphur dioxide, hydrocarbons, and carbon monoxide.

No successful way has been found to remove sulphur dioxide from waste gases poured out by the smokestacks of the great coal-burning power stations that supply the bulk of Britain's electric power. The national government is sponsoring research in this field, but no practical and fully effective method appears likely until at least 1973.

In the meantime, the British are trying, where possible, to use low-sulphur fuels that are both scarce and expensive.

The British record in getting rid of the worst of the smoke that used to hang so low over London and other cities indicates that the central government has the power, the determination and the organization to beat pollution. And the average citizen, be he a bowler-hatted businessman or coveralled dustman — that's U.K. English for a garbageman — is ready to support the government.

Official concern over air pollution in Britain goes back 107 years, to be Alkali Act of 1863 which was passed to control the nuisance created by primitive chemical industries.

The university-graduate Alkali Act inspectors, each a specialist in his own branch of chemical or physical science, rely on good corporate citizenship of industry, co-operation with industry and the threat of public condemnation that would result from prosecution. There were only two prosecutions last year.

British industry operates under close scrutiny. The Act lists 56 kinds of works that are thought likely to cause air pollution. They range from oil refineries to pottery factories.

Once established and operating industries are subjected to continuous and regular inspection by specialist inspectors highly trained in the methods of the industries they're checking. They can demand and receive any information they require about industrial processes, even secret ones that would be guarded closely from competitors.

The government does little actual pollution testing or measuring. Inspectors make the industries do the testing.

Such a system certainly is economical. The government claims it works very well because over a very long period British industry has come to accept the tradition that pollution control forms part of the cost of doing business, and that discharge of noxious gases just wont' be tolerated.

Under the Alkali Act, the central government directly controls invisible and industrial pollution. Local governments, supervised by national authorities, are responsible for smoke pollution control.

They are the ones who've achieved such spectacular success, particularly in greater London.

They've managed it chiefly by outlawing the old-fashioned open coal fireplace. In designated smoke control areas — they take in 75 per cent of Greater London — it's prohibited to allow black smoke to escape from a chimney.

THE SACRAMENTO SCENE

Reagan Shuts Down Campuses; Welfare Marchers Arrive

By CAPITOL NEWS SERVICE

Campus unrest and violence led Gov. Ronald Reagan to request closure of all campuses of the University of California and the California State Colleges for a long and hopefully peaceful weekend, Thursday to Monday. U. C. President Charles Hitch, and State College Chancellor Glenn Dumke concurred and forwarded the request to campus authorities, who quickly complied.

Chancellor Sidney Brossman of the Community Colleges, formerly junior colleges, wired local administrators of the 92 campuses to inform them that if they closed as the governor suggested, he would take steps to see that they did not lose state aid. Twenty-nine campuses closed down, 38 were open and holding classes, and 25 were open to some activities but were not conducting classes.

The Governor said he hoped the cooling-off period would give students and faculty time to reflect on the grave consequences of current events and consider their responsibilities away from the highly emotional conditions now prevailing on most campuses.

Adult protest was demonstrated at a meeting of the Assembly Health and Welfare Committee, convened to consider AB 1360, a welfare reform bill introduced by Assemblyman Gordon Duffy, R-Hanford, and written along lines approved by the administration.

The bill would basically increase aid to families with dependent children, a category of aid that hasn't been increased since 1958, largely at the expense of other categories.

Perhaps taking a cue from campus activities, protesters, mostly from welfare-rights organizations, flooded the hearing room, horned in on the debate, interrupted speakers, lectured the author, and in response to a threat to adjourn the meeting for lack of order, attempted to bar the doors and keep the committee members in the room.

Meanwhile, the children which a great number of the audience had brought with them romped about the room playing their own games which seemed to have no connecion with the debate. Assemblyman Pete Wilson, R-San Diego, had to go to his office during the debate, but he almost didn't make it. His way was barred, and after a good deal of pulling and hauling and the timely arrival of state police and sergeants at arms, he finally got free. When he returned a while later, it was his turn to lecture the audience. The upshot was that no action was taken on the bill.

The Governor's tax plan went down to what seemed to be final defeat on a 39 to 0 vote, with Assembly Democrats abstaining. Forty-one votes were needed for passage, and with Assemblyman Pat McGee, R-Woodland Hills, hospitalized in San Francisco, there just weren't enough Republican votes to put the measure across, even if another Republican Assemblyman hadn't been absent.

The party split in the Assembly is 41 Republicans and 40 Democrats.

Democrats demanded that money for schools be put into the tax-reform package, AB 1000 and AB 1001, and that the oil-depletion allowance be changed. The author, Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael feels he has done the best he can on the oil taxes, and that school relief should be handled in separate legislation.

The Democratic opposition feels that if it doesn't get money for schools into a bill that the administration and the Assembly Republicans want pretty badly, they won't get it into any other bills either.

The two bills aim at a shift of about $650 million off the property tax rolls, the lost revenue to be made up with increased sales and income taxes, payroll withholding of the income tax, and increases in business and corporation taxes.

The administration would like to have its bills in effect before the June primary, to forestall what Bagley called "irresponsible ballot propositions" that would give property tax relief, but leave it up to the Legislature to find the money to make up the lost revenue. Bagley says the way is open to negotiation to revive the plan, but the June 2 election date is getting closer every day.

The "Oregon primary" plan was approved by the Senate, both in the form of a bill and a constitutional amendment. This plan would have the secretary of state list all promi nently-mentioned presidential candidates on the primary ballot, unless they formally declared that they were not candidates.

People not listed but wanting to get on could circulate petitions, as at present.

The author, Sen. Alfred E. Alquist, D-San Jose, points out that under the present California system, California voters did not get a chance to vote for either of the ultimate candidates in the 1968 presidential primary contest.

The Legislature has passed similar bills in the past, but they have run afoul the governor's veto.

This time the Senate has passed a bill, which requires only a simple majority, but which the governor would have to sign if it were to become law, and a constitutional amendment, which requires a two-thirds vote, but would be presented to the voters for a decision without any action by the governor. Both measures, SB 3 and SCA 3, passed with two-thirds majorities.

U.S. Disturbed Over Cambodia, Kent

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The war in Southeast Asia figuratively reached the shores of the United States Monday when Ohio National Guard troops opened fire on Kent State University students protesting the U. S. invasion of Cambodia.

The guardsmen apparently overreacted to provocations by the students who taunted and threw rocks and stones at them. The tragic result was four students—two of them coeds—killed by the rifle fire and another 10 wounded.

"It was senseless, utterly senseless," said the father of one of the victims, 19-year-old Allison Krausse.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew called the tragedy "predictable and avoidable" and later stated he believed the guardsmen overreacted."

The commander of the National Guard at Kent said his men "were provoked beyond all reason."

Who was right?

Investigating committees already at work can conceivably identify the finger that pulled the trigger precipitating the holocaust.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

CAMBODIA — Cambodia and Red China broke diplomatic relations over China's recognition of a government-in-exile by Prince Norodom Sihanouk, ousted Cambodian chief of state.

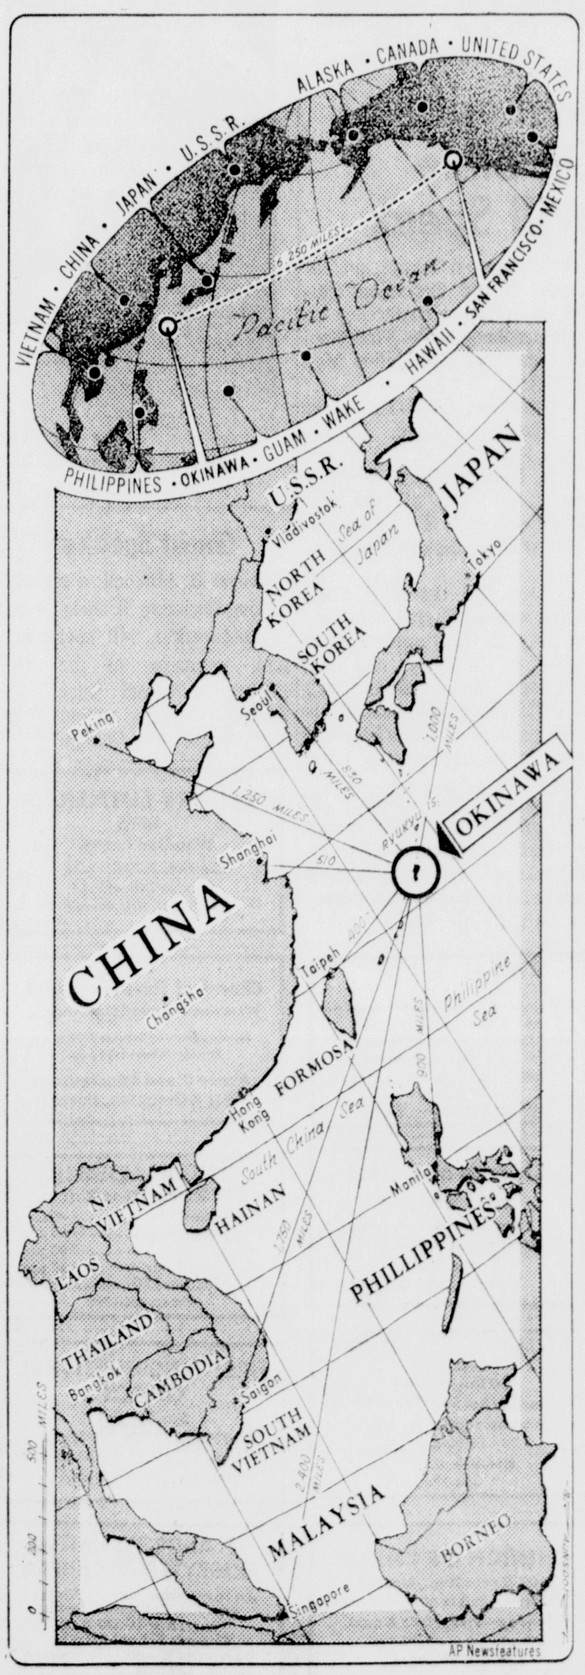

Communist troops captured the important ferry crossing town of Neak Luong on the Mekong River, 30 miles southeast of Phnom Penh.

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon announced the end of large-scale air strikes against North Vietnam.

BIRMINGHAM — Former Gov. George C. Wallace ran slightly behind Gov. Albert P. Brewer in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. A runoff election will be held next month since neither man received a majority of the votes.

COLUMBUS, Ohio—In senatorial primaries Rep. Robert Taft, Jr. beat GOP Gov. James A. Rhodes and little known Howard M. Metzner defeated one-time astronaut John Glenn in the Democratic race.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court upheld a New York ruling that exemption of churches from property taxation did not violate the constitution.

RETURNING TO JAPAN

Okinawa In Key Military Spot

NAHA, Okinawa (AP)—Since the United States captured the western Pacific island of Okinawa during World War II, it has developed into what American military planners regard as a keystone of defense in the area.

The island's "central position in the arc of Free World defensive strength from the Aleutians to Southeast Asia and beyond largely accounts for the U.S. military presence here," Robert A. Fearey, the U.S. civil administrator, said in a recent speech.

A look at the map shows what Fearey was talking about. Okinawa is situated 830 miles from the South Korean capital of Seoul, 400 miles from Taipei, Formosa; 510 miles from Shanghai, Communist China's main industrial city; and 860 miles from Hong Kong.

While Americans may regard it as ideally situated for military maneuvers and influence in the area, many Okinawans don't relish the role.

With Okinawa and the rest of the Ryuku Islands due to be returned to Japanese rule by 1972, the question of what is to become of U.S. military installations is largely unsettled.

The agreement worked out between Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato and President Nixon calls for prior consultation with Japanese authorities before any major moves involving U.S. bases in the islands. Major moves would include moving men or equipment in or out and any combat strikes launched from them.

Sources have said that American military men oppose anything that might hinder quick action in the event of an emergency.

The question of American nuclear arms on Okinawa is unsettled mainly because the U.S. won't comment on whether or not they are there. The Japanese and Okinawans both say nuclear weapons are based on the island, and both say they want them out when they resume governing in 1972.

Sato has said the U.S. has agreed to remove nuclear weapons. But American sources say that even after 1972, there is likely to be no official comment on whether American nuclear weapons are based there.

The defensive punch now maintained by the United States on the island includes fighter-bombers, missiles, a division of combat-ready Marines and the lethal eight-engine B52 bombers which fly on missions over Vietnam.

The question of the B52 missions to Vietnam is not settled either. The Japanese and Okinawans want the big bombers withdrawn. Many claim they are a safety hazard. Leftists see them as an undesirable link between Okinawa and the American position in the war.

The present American approach seems to be to wait and see if the missions still are regarded as necessary by 1972.

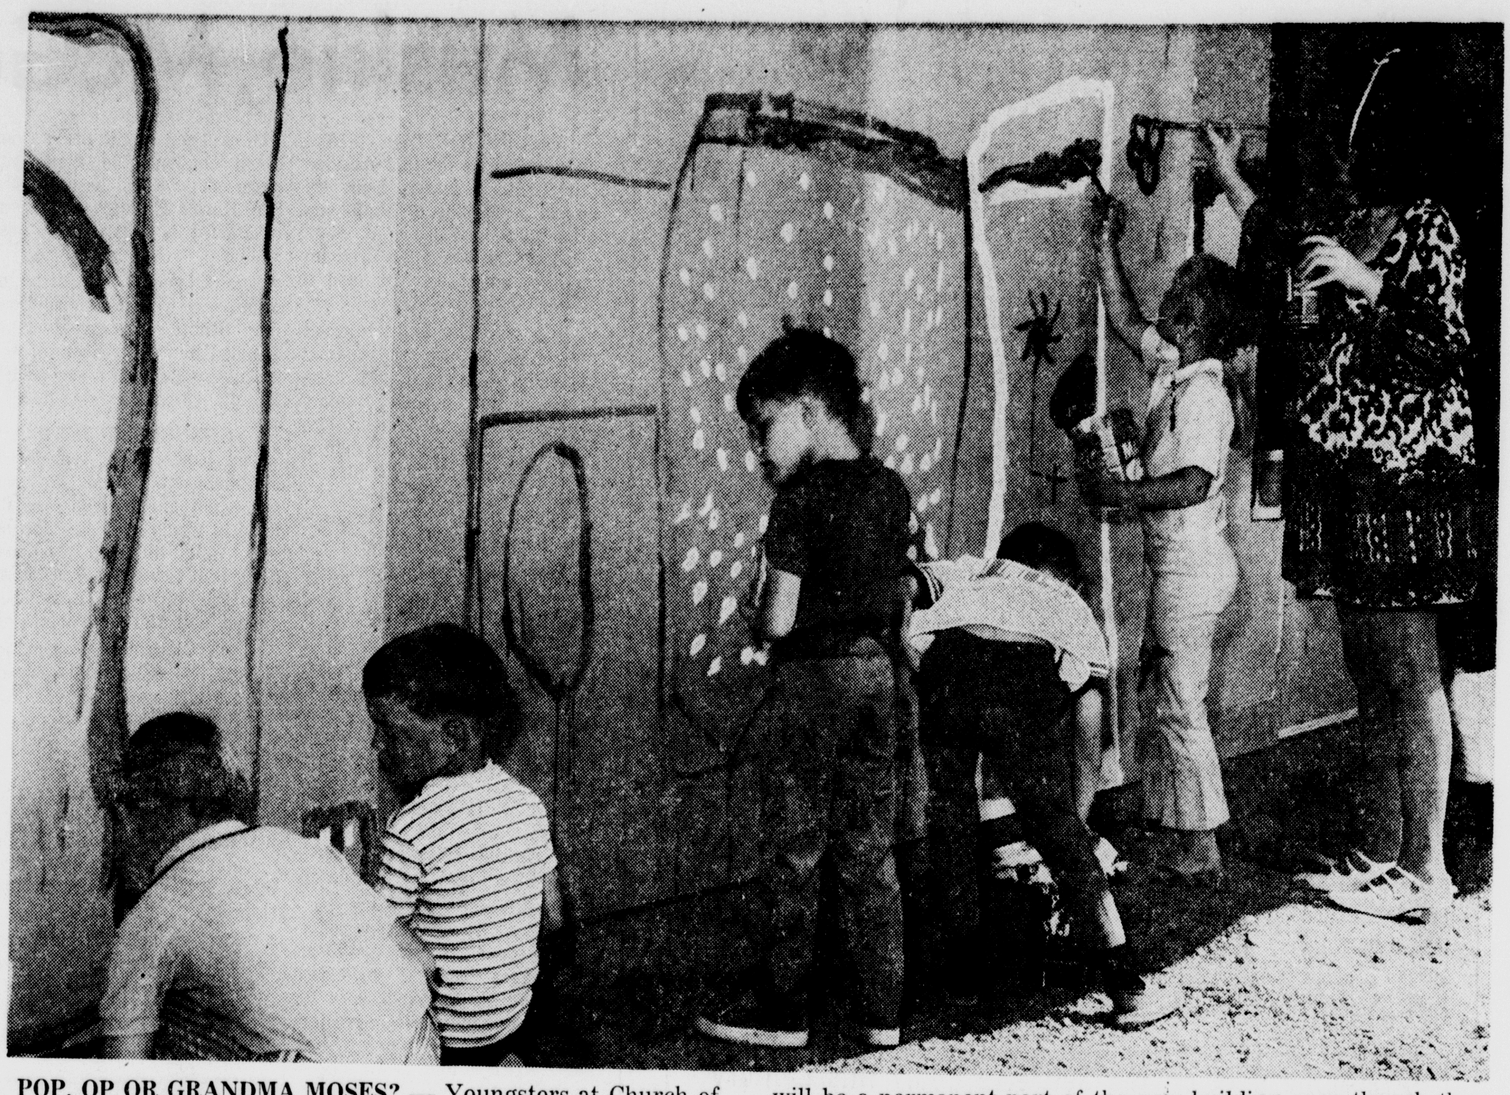

American bases occupy 26 per cent of Okinawa. The United States pays about $10.5 million each year in rent to small landowners on Okinawa and some of the smaller islands in the Ryuku chain.

A commonly cited figure for the initial American investment in the bases is $1 billion. Estimates for costs of building similar installations elsewhere — on Guam, 1,000 miles to the southeast, for example — range up to about $3 billion.

The Air Force 313th Division has about 20,000 men in uniform on the island and provides jobs for about 7,000 American civilians and 1,600 Okinawans. The Army's 2nd Logistics Command, clustered around Naha, has 11,000 employes, including about 6,000 Okinawans and 4,200 American civilians. Marine strength on the island will be about 19,000 with the completion of the withdrawal of the 3rd Marine Division from Vietnam.

READY FOR ACTION — With Jean Husen and Gay Anderson handing out supplies, children at Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera line up to apply their artistic talents to the church's new building's unfinished outside walls.

POP, OP OR GRANDMA MOSES? — Youngsters at Church of All Faiths busily apply brush strokes to their creations which will be a permanent part of the new building even though the works will be covered by an outside layer of wood.

Children Dress Up Bare Walls

"God Is Everywhere."

That's the theme youngsters at Church of All Faiths in Corte Madera took last Sunday as they did their "thing" in dressing up the walls of the uncompleted annex to the sanctuary.

According to Rev. Joseph L. Hughes, pastor, the new building will belong to the children as much as any segment of the church since it will give them expanded classroom space.

The final "layer" of the new building, which is 40 per cent complete, went up this week with the artistic expressions covered over with the outside layer of wood.

Of the creations, Hughes remarked: "Who knows, future generations may find another Rembrant or Michelangelo when they tear this building down a century from now."

Present plans call opening the new complex on Sunday, May 24, with a musical program featuring the Redwood High School vocal ensemble, the chancel choir of the Seventh Avenue Presbyterian Church of San Francisco and guest soloists Alama Wells and Kathy Baxter.

Church of All Faiths, an affiliate of the American Baptist Convention, is composed of a membership made up of more than 20 denominations.

Theological College Is Admitting Women

LONDON (AP)—Women are to be admitted to Lincoln Theological College to train alongside men for joint pastoral work in the Church of England. A first experiment in training the sexes together began at Cranmer Hall, Durham, three years ago. Before that, women were trained in small colleges recognized by the Council for Women's Ministry. Women cannot yet be ordained as priests in the Church of England, though they may serve as lay preachers, deaconesses or in religious orders.

Recording Star To Give Folk Concert

Betsy Chapman, formerly of Larkspur, will present a folk concert Saturday, May 17, at 7:30 p.m. in the Redwoods Presbyterian Church, sponsored by church's young people to help raise funds for Operation Give A Damn (OGAD), a big brother-sister program in Marin City.

BETSY CHAPMAN
Returning to Marin

Miss Chapman records under the Capitol label. She has a new album on the market, "The Gift of Love."

According to David Poling of the Christian Herald, Miss Chapman has "the wild idea that the Christian faith can break out of rigid boundaries and give excitement and hope to those in and out of the church.

"Some of her music has been incorporated in folk masses, performed in formal worship services. Other sections would be greeted with applause at Woodstock and anywhere else the 'now' generation decides to encamp."

Guest Speaker

Robert H. Mitchell, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will speak at 3 p.m. tomorrow at the First Church of Christ Scientist in Sausalito on the subject "Are You Receptive to Change?"

Big Uproar Over Firing Of Marin Catholic Coaches

Marin Catholic High School erupted in a storm of protest yesterday following the announcement earlier in the week that Gary Hughes will not be rehired as athletic director next year, and head football coach and teacher Cliff Vattuone will not be rehired at all.

The announcement came Thursday from Joseph Breen, head of the Kentfield school's Teachers' Association, who along with a majority of faculty and students rallied to the defense of the coaches.

The school's faculty met Thursday night and again yesterday afternoon, calling for the dismissal of the principal, Monsignor Edward Dullea, and a reshuffling of the administration.

Monsignor Dullea's secretary said yesterday that he was not accepting telephone calls when he was asked to comment for the administration.

At a baseball game yesterday afternoon Marin Catholic players wore black armbands in support of Hughes, who is head coach of the team. Breen said Hughes has not been fired from that position or as a teacher.

Vattuone, who learned of the administration's decision Wednesday, said yesterday, "I'm shocked. I think that the charges leveled against me were invalid. I still don't know what the basis for those charges were."

Breen said the charges against Vattuone in his first year as football coach, were lack of leadership qualities and a failure to instill spirit in the football team, which last season had a record of 3 wins, 4 loses and 2 ties. The school's record the previous three years was 8-16-1.

Hughes, who is in his first year as the director and has a one year contract, was dismissed, according to Breen, for causing the baseball team to be barred from post-season play for scheduling a pre-season scrimmage, leaving gym doors unlocked, failing to have the football stands erected on schedule because finances weren't available, loss of revenue at the first two football games because of lax organization and leaving the pitching machine out.

Hughes said today that any comment from him before the school issues a public statement would only serve to damage the situation further.

He did state, however, that he went to the administration Monday to discuss the matter. It is his contention that the charges against him involve things that can for the most part be easily corrected.

Breen was less diplomatic. "The entire policy of their (the administration) review and dismissal is subject to question and immediate review," he said.

Neither Hughes nor Vattuone had any prior knowledge that the dismissals were forthcoming.

John Bechtold, the school's director of publicity, said that Dullea had told Vattuone after the football season that he was satisfied with the coach's performance and the team's record.

Vatuonne stated that he was puzzled by the decision to fire him from his teaching duties as well as the coaching job. Referring to the latter, he said, "I've never seen them (the administrators) at more than two of our games."

According to Breen and Bechtold, a vast majority of persons on the campus are behind the coaches. "The faculty is demanding a reshuffling of the administration on a more reasonable basis than simple siniority," stated Breen. "They are demanding reinstatement of the coaches, that the athletic department have an informative voice in electing the athletic director, and that applications for new and existing jobs be open to all."

Bechtold said that all the members of the varsity football team have signed a petition supporting Vattuone.

One, Long Season, So Bet On Youth

Remember when, if you saw a guy in a raccoon coat and a flask, you knew he was going to a football game?

Remember when, if you saw him in sleeve garters, straw hat and a beer, you knew he was going to a baseball game?

Remember when, if you saw a girl and guy walking through the snow to a gymnasium and she had a corsage and gold shoes on, you knew they were going to a basketball game and the dance afterward?

Well, you can no longer tell sports seasons by the haberdashery. I was struck by this watching the Knicks-Lakers playoff game last night, and all those kids ran out on the floor at the end, and I noticed they were wearing short-sleeved shirts or none at all and some weren't even wearing socks and I thought, "Why, they'll catch their death of cold!"

Waiting For The Evening Breeze

Then I realized it was almost the middle of May and they might have to go home after the basketball game to a paper fan and a pitcher of lemonade and its out on the stoop till a breeze came up.

If Minnesota gets in the World Series this year, even the players may need raccoon coats. The climate at the opening exhibition football game is likely to be equatorial. Hockey hopes to have a clear-cut winner by the Fourth of July. Basketball will be more modest. It has already cut into the World Series, the football season, the baseball season and the Kentucky Derby, but it will be out of the way before the Indianapolis 500.

Seasons don't overlap anymore, they coincide. Three more doomed stadiums and we can have 300-game baseball seasons (per team) and 100-game football seasons. Basketball can even play matinees. Season tickets can cost you $20,000. They can artfully rework the playoffs (which are not included in your season tickets) so they can cost even more. In addition to Unisex, we will now have Uniseason.

Seek Ways To Stretch Calendar

Knowing the cupidity of sports entrepreneurs, I can see them going any day now to the government to see if there's some way we can stretch the calendar to 13 months. They can copy a leaf from Treasury and borrow the extra days from 1989 to 1999 and let another generation figure how to pay them back.

The yawning maw of television will go from doubleheaders to tripleheaders to round-the-clock football. There are already plans for a second golf tour, which, presumably, will one day challenge the older existent golf tour, defeat it in a playoff, merge, then establish another golf tour. To be played at 6 a.m.

They already have plans to stretch out the Super Bowl to 2-out-of-3. So, why not 6-out-of-11? They have figured out how to make the World Series THREE series. The sports universe is expanding at a rate great-

Reed, Knicks Rule Pro Cage

NEW YORK (AP) — Where there's a Willis, there's a way.

And the New York Knicks found that way behind pain-ravaged Willis Reed Friday night, beating the Los Angeles Lakers with surprising ease 113-99 to win the National Basketball Association title.

New York's ace center, playing "because there's no tomorrow" and loaded with pain-killing cortisone, provided a physical and inspirational lift to give the Knicks their first championship in the final, seventh game before a deafening full house at Madison Square Garden.

"The fans were just great, and I didn't want to disappoint them," Reed said in the champagne-drenched euphoria of the winner's dressing room. "When I was warming up, there was a lot of questions in my mind.

"I said to myself, you must do the job ... your team needs you."

SEVENTH SETBACK

"Probably a lot of guys wouldn't have played in his condition," said a disappointed Jerry West, the Lakers' super guard, who lost his seventh playoff series. "It was a real tribute to the man that he was out there at all."

Reed, the NBA's Most Valuable Player and the Knicks' acknowledged leader, badly bruised his right hip in Monday's fifth game here. He sat out Wednesday night's loss to the Lakers that tied the series at 3-3.

Before the final game, he had two pain-killing shots pumped into the right hip area. Then, just before game time, he walked onto the court amid a thundering, standing ovation.

Reed had said before the game, "I'll play if I can crawl." He almost had to.

GRIMACED, HOBBLED

His opponent at center, Wilt Chamberlain, beat him down the court on many plays in the first half. Reed was playing on one leg. He grimaced and hobbled, but got the job done—that is, he stopped Chamberlain.

"I felt if I could get enough pain-killer into the leg, I'd be all right," said Reed. "I had to be able to pivot on the foot."

"I was apprehensive from the first moment he stepped on the court," said Red Holzman, the Knicks' coach who was soaked from a dressing room champagne shower. "We meant to use Willis defensively from the start. He knew what he had to do."

Reed also got the Knicks going offensively. He scored the Knicks' first two field goals with his needle-threading jumper from the key. That brought Chamberlain out, and nullified his awesome rebounding presence under the basket.

While Reed draped himself around Chamberlain, Walt Frazier scored 15 of his game-high 36 points. This helped the Knicks to a 38-24 first quarter edge, and it was all downhill for New York after that.

THE BRIDESMAIDS

Reed played the first half, as New York all but buried the hopes of the bridesmaid Lakers with a 69-42 lead. He got another pain-killing shot at the intermission, then played about half of the third quarter.

At the 5:44 mark, backup center Nate Bowman came in with the Knicks ahead 81-56 and the confetti-tossing crowd uncontrollable with glee.

"Willis told me how to play Chamberlain," said Bowman. "He told me to just keep my elbow in his back and lay on him real good."

The advice worked. Chamberlain wound up with 21 points, far from his Herculean performance of 45 Wednesday.

The seconds ticked away in the third quarter, and the crowd got more unruly. Other Knicks took turns hitting baskets—Dick Barnett, Dave DeBusschere and Bill Bradley—and drove more nails into the Laker casket.

At the end of the third quarter, it was 94-69 New York.

SCRIBES DRENCHED

"I felt we had them at the first quarter," said Bowman, swilling champagne, then drenching a crowd of sports writers with bubbly. "I can't explain—I just felt that with Willis out there, it was all over."

"He played on courage," said Bradley, speaking of Reed. "He did what he needed to do."

Reed was voted the Most Valuable Player of this world series of basketball and will collect a car for it.

The Knicks won a total of $118,000 from the playoffs, about $8,000 to $9,000 a man. The Lakers, who lost for the seventh time without tasting victory champagne, get $87,000 or $6,000 to $7,000 each.

West, who scored 28 points to lead Los Angeles, said: "We were never in the game. The Knicks handled the ball well, they shoot well and they're intelligent."

Then, reflecting on playoffs past and present, West added: "This was not the toughest series ... it was more embarrassing than tough."

Redwood Ups League Lead As Novato Beats San Marin

John Boro belted a three run home run and then Jerry Piro crashed a grand slam homer as Redwood High School exploded for seven runs in the fourth inning yesterday to beat Marin Catholic, 9-4 and remain undefeated in the Marin County Athletic League.

The Giants of Larkspur, who have now won 10 league games, increased their lead over second place San Marin as Novato downed the Mustangs, 2-0 on the strength of Dave Judnick's three-hit pitching and first inning home run.

In other MCAL games, Terra Linda came from behind to knock off San Rafael, 7-6, and Tamalpais blasted last place Drake, 13-6.

GIANTS ERUPT

The Giants, who are hitting better than .300 as a team, waited until two were out in the fourth before erupting against Marin Catholic. Then Tom Wickert singled, Jerry Caito singled, and Boro unloaded him homer, to make the score 3 to 1.

Redwood proceeded to load the bases again, on base hits by Charlie Flynn and pitcher Jeff Nedd, and a walk to Kevin Ward. Piro then ripped a shot 350 feet over the left field fence to wrap up the game. Piro and Boro each has three homers this season.

Judnick, who got the only run he needed when he blasted a two out homer to centerfield in the first inning, pitched almost flawlessly as he lowered his league leading earned run average to 0.80.

GNOSS STOPPED

Catcher Jack Burnam got two of San Marins' three hits. Judnick held Ken Gnoss hitless in three trips, the first time this year the league's leading hitter has been blanked.

The Mustangs are now two games behind Redwood, and one game ahead of Terra Linda.

Terra Linda came up with what proved to be the winning run when Rick Payne singled in the sixth with the bases loaded to score Bill Berry, who had doubled to open the inning.

San Rafael's Larry Brazda led all hitters with three hits in three trips, including a double and a solo home run in the fifth.

Bob Daniele had a triple for Terra Linda.

The hard hitting Tam Indians shelled three Drake pitchers for 14 hits, including four by Scott McCammon, and three each by Clifford Hall and Jan Brink.

The Losing Pirates' Bob Sutherland unloaded a grand slam homer in the fourth to make the score respectable.

OAKLAND (AP) — It took more than two runs but Manager John McNamara finally found the Oakland A's team he has been looking for.

"We put it all together at last," he said after the A's wallopped the Boston Red Sox 7-1 Friday night.

"We got good pitching, timely hitting and made the plays in the field," he said.

The A's, who had been bothered by pitchers with sore arms and hitters plagued by slumps, got a four-hit performance out of sore-armed Chuck Dobson and four runs batted in from third baseman Sal Bando.

(Among the Boston pitchers victimized by the Oakland muscle was southpaw Bill Lee of Terra Linda who worked two innings of relief, the sixth and seventh, giving up four hits, two runs, walking one and striking out none.)

Dobson won his second game of the season with a four-hitter. He lost his shutout when Boston slugger Carl Yastrzemski hit a 445-foot homer to lead off the ninth inning.

But the game had long been decided by that time as Bando drove in two runs with his fifth homer of the season in the first inning and batted in two more with a single in the fifth.

HAND INJURY

Bando missed 11 games with a hand injury, but has been hitting the ball sharply with his return to the lineup.

He has seven hits in the last four games, including two doubles and two home runs.

"I didn't think I was in a slump," Bando said. "It's too early in the season to be in a slump. I just got off to a slow start because of the injury."

Dobson completed only his second game of the season. He was lucky to be around in the ninth inning. A line drive off the bat of Reggie Smith in the first inning hit him on the shoulder, and another hard sharp by Gerry Moses rapped him on the arm in the seventh inning.

Oakland catcher Dave Duncan hit an inside-the-park home run. He circled the bases after Boston centerfielder Smith knocked himself out against the fence chasing Duncan's long fly.

Asked if it was his first inside-the-park homer, Duncan replied:

"I'm so slow it's hard for me to even get a double."

Awe-Struck Mexican Rookie, Mays Team Up To Beat Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — A 39-year-old youngster named Willie Mays helped Miguel Puente celebrate his 22nd birthday with a pair of 400-foot gifts and the awe-struck Mexican gained his first major league triumph in his initial visit to New York.

"There were so many people watching," Puente said nervously in halting English, after hurling the San Francisco Giants to a 7-1 victory over the New York Mets Friday night before 43,109 fans at Shea Stadium.

"I have never pitched before this many people," said Puente, making his second start after being recalled from Phoenix recently.

The resident of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, admitted to being nervous at the start, but felt better after Willie hit his second home run. "He's still a young man to me," said Puente. "I had never seen him before but I knew all about him. He was one of my idols."

Mays, in his 19th season, slammed a solo homer in the opening inning over the left field fence off loser Gary Gentry, 3-1, and ripped a 3-0 fastball in the same direction off the right-hander in the sixth with Bobby Bonds on with a single for a 3-0 lead .

"I just played my regular game," said Mays, cementing his No. 2 spot on the all-time home run list behind Babe Ruth's 714, with Nos. 605 and 606 Friday night.

"I play ball the same way all the time, I don't put out any more because it's New York. The people here treat me great, but that's not the way to play. You put out the same all the time."

Bonds also added an inside-the-park homer for the Giants in a four-run eighth inning and Mays contributed a single, raising his average to .288 with six homers and 15 runs batted in.

"I don't consider myself a home run hitter anymore," Mays said. "I'm just not that strong anymore. I'll get my share but a real home run hitter is consistent. I don't feel that I'm that consistent anymore. I'm just concentrating on hitting the ball and winning. I don't have any goals and I'll play as long as I'm healthy and don't embarass myself.

"I'm in good shape now and I don't feel 39 and I've been playing good."

er than anyone's ability to cope with it. You have to do what they do at Palomar: Take a picture of it through a telescope and then study the picture for trends and details.

Begins To Interest Bettors

One constant pattern is beginning to emerge of interest to the bettor: With stretched-out schedules, more and longer trips to new and distant franchises, increased hours of tension, a line is easy to establish. When it gets down to the end, bet on youth.

In basketball, a Bill Russell had to save himself over the season to be able to eke out his last championship. Then he quit. In baseball, a fat old gaffer could coast through the old, leisurely 154-game daytime season and be fresh at Series time. Now, only strong young arms can survive the season, a pressure-packed, 3-out-of-5 playoff and come into a World Series with their concentration and fastball intact. In football, only the young vigorously can bounce back quickly enough after an exhibition-regular-and-post-season set of concussions, nose bleeds and knee-locks, and be healed enough to win the Super Bowl. Experience only counts when you're not too tired — or too hurt — to use it.

All I know is, by 1984, the championship team in any given sport will average 14 years of age. And, if you'll hand me my pith h e i m e t, shorts, and mosquito-repellant, I must be off now for the opening of the football season.

World 100 Mark Tied

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Willie McGee of Alcorn A&M College equaled the world's record of 9.1 Friday night in the 100-yard dash in the preliminaries of the Southwest Athletic Conference championship track meet.

McGee ran his unofficial record with a trailing wind of 3.75 miles an hour, well below the maximum allowed.

Robert Taylor of Texas Southern University turned in a 9.2 clocking for the 100-yard dash in another prelim.

Finals in the event will be run Saturday night.

Bob Hayes, former Olympian now with the Dallas Cowboys, was the first to hit 9.1, in the National Amateur Athletic Union championships at St. Louis, June 21, 1963.

Petaluma Suffers Costly Setback To Montgomery

Time ran out for Petaluma High School yesterday as the Trojans were vittually eliminated from the North Bay League Section I baseball championship race after an 8-2 loss to Montgomery High at Santa Rosa.

The Trojans, led by centerfielder Bob Garcia's three hits, outslugged the Vikings 11-7 but couldn't put their hits together.

The loss left Petaluma with an 8-2 won-lost mark in NBL-I play, good for second place behind league-leading Napa (9-0). The Trojans play the Indians in Napa Tuesday.

MacKay Wins, Walsh Loses

Barry did and Sharon didn't.

That sums up how Marin's two tennis stars fared yesterday in the Central California Tennis Championships at Sacramento.

Barry MacKay, former Davis Cup star now living in Ross, defeated Alex Olmedo of Los Angeles 6-4, 6-4.

Sharon Walsh, the 18-year-old national champ from San Rafael, was eliminated by Denise Carter of Los Altos, 8-6,6-0.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, May 9, the 129th day of 1970 with 236 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this day in history:

In 1502 Christopher Columbus set sail from Cadiz, Spain on his fourth and last trip to America.

In 1926 Commander Richard Byrd and Floyd Bennett became the first men to fly over the North Pole.

In 1946 King Victor Emmanual III of Italy abdicated, leaving the throne to his son, Crown Prince Humbert.

In 1961 Chairman Newton Minow of the Federal Communications Commission told 2,000 broadcasters in Washington- . . . "When television is good nothing is better, but when television is bad nothing is worse.

A thought for the day: French playwright Piette Corneille said, "Do your duty and leave the rest to heaven."

Downtown Plan May Be Passed In Tiburon

Possible approval of Tiburon's Buskirk-Noble downtown plan and consideration of a request for a $4,000 subsidy to Marin Transit Systems top a long Tiburon City Council agenda Monday at 8 p.m. in city hall.

Also to be held are public hearings on amending the zoning ordinance to allow clustering of buildings on in residential zones and a master plan by the Ecumenical Association for Housing to build 112 units of moderate income housing at Tiburon Boulevard and Highway 101.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

In Doubling, West Displays More Greed Than Discretion

"Judgement is not upon all occasions required," Lord Chesterfield once wrote, "but discretion always is." Part of the art of being discreet at the bridge table is to pick your spot for a penalty double. In today's hand, for example, West displayed more greed than discretion.

LOW CLUB

West opened the six of clubs and sat back to get his four sure trump tricks. He'd have won them if he hadn't doubled, and West might have gotten away with the double against a poor player but the double was precisely the wrong weapon to use against an expert.

New York expert Alan Truscott, who has been known to write a thing or two about bridge, had no trouble in placing the trumps after West's double. Truscott took the first trick in dummy with the king of clubs, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond.

Declarer got back to dummy with the ace of clubs to ruff another diamond and returned again with the ace of spades to ruff a third low diamond. He then cashed the king of spades and continued with the queen of spades.

WEST RUFFS

West ruffed with the nine of hearts, and South discarded dummy's low club. West considered leading the ace and another heart, but South would win and would lead another spade to make sure of a tenth trick with dummy's eight of hearts.

For lack of anything else, West led his last club. Truscott ruffed in dummy and led the jack of diamonds. East ruffed with the three of hearts, but declarer discarded and West was obliged to overruff with the ten. West then had to lead from the acelqueen of hearts, giving South his tenth trick with the king of hearts.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one-no-trump (16 to 18 points), and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ J 3
♥ A Q 10 9
♦ Q 10 7 6
♣ 10 8 6

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to show a major suit of four or more cards if he can.

If partner bids two hearts, you will raise to four hearts; if he bids anything else, you will jump to three no-trump.

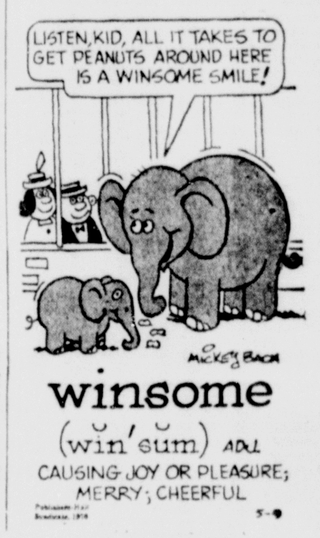

Symphony Group Performance Set

The Sonoma State College Philharmonic, under the direction of David R. Sprung, will present two afternoon performances May 16 and 17 at 2:30 p.m. in Ives Hall of Music.

Works by Haydn, Sibelius and Robinson will be performed with the feature work being Earl Robinson's "Concerto for Five String Banjo and Orchestra."

The composer's stepson, Sonoma State student Michael Martin, will appear as the solist and Robinson will also participate.

Sleepy Hollow To Get Private Club?

A group of men holding an option to purchase the Sleepy Hollow stable on Butterfield Road has told the Sleepy Hollow Homes Association it plans to build a private swimming and tennis club on the property.

The group, including Robert A. Braghetta and Webster Otis, both of Ross, on Thursday outlined plans for a club for 150 families on the 15.5 acre parcel owned by Rudolph Lang, according to association president Merritt A. Robinson.

The association officers will discuss their feelings on the proposed facility at a public meeting May 21 at 8 p.m. in the clubhouse, Robinson said.

The officers and members of the San Anselmo Homes Association also agreed, Robinson said that all proposed roads to connect the Ross Valley and Terra Linda would fail to preserve the existing environment in Sleepy Hollow and San Anselmo.

It was agreed by all, Robinson added, that the roads would change the quiet residential neighborhoods into busy thoroughfares and should be opposed.

Sleepy Hollow Homeowners Association Also:

POOL — Set May 29 as the opening of the pool for weekend use and June 13 for daily use and set a $20 family membership fee for pool use from May to October. Hired five lifeguards and two substitutes at $2 an hour.

CANDIDATES — Set May 27 at 7:30 p.m. in the clubhouse as a public candidates night for 11 persons seeking the Marin Municipal judgeship.

CABANA — Urged Marin County Board of Supervisors to grant variance to Robert Franceschini 100 Van Winkle Drive, for a swimming pool cabana.

FLOOD — Urged the supervisors to pass proposed flood control ordinance at their May 26 meeting.

COMMITTEE — Appointed a committee to report at May 21 meeting on the possible establishment of flood control subzone for the unicorporated areas of the Ross Valley to provide services such as cleanup of the Corte Madera Creek.

Novato Approves New Rotary Tot Lot PLan

Novato will have another Rotary-sponsored tot lot. The plans were approved by the Plan Review Committee Wednesday, according to Secretary Juanita gibson.

The Novato Rotary Club will construct the lot on land owned by the Novato Sanitary District at its Joyce Street pumping station. The City of Novato, sanitary district and North Marin County Water District have contributed to this park.

This will be the second park constructed by the Rotary Club. The first was at Olive and Railroad avenues.

The Plan Review Committee also:

Mill Valley To Eye North Ridge

Mill Valley Planning Commission will discuss a street plan for future development of the city's North Ridge when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. in city hall.

The city is preparing now to be able to move large numbers of cars in an and out of the ridge area when it ultimately is developed, according to Planning Director Harvey E. Bragdon.

Also on the agenda is consideration of a master plan for Mill Ridge, a 250-unit development on the southeastern tip of Warner Ridge, proposed by William E. Cullen.

Judge Scolds, Jails Young Defendent On Death Threat

Judge Alvin H. Goldstein Jr. of Marin Municipal Court yesterday sentenced George Tipton Bonomolo, 20, of Noavto, to 90 days in jail for threatening the life of a man slated to be a witness in a drug case against Bonomolo.

"If this young man acts like an underworld figure, he's going to be treated like one," the judge said in handing out the maximum sentence for the misdemeanor offense of disturbing the peace.

Judge Goldstein had earlier found Bonomolo guilty of threatening Jack Andrew Eastman, also of Novato. Eastman had told police that on June 4, 1969, Bonomolo told him, "we're going to get you," adding that Eastman was the person responsible for his arrest by narcotics agents.

Earlier this week Bonomolo pleaded guilty in superior court to a charge of selling marijuana to a narcotics agent last year. He is due to be sentenced on the felony count on May 18.

Judge Goldstein, who said that Bonomolo was denied work furlough privileges during his jail sentence, refused to allow a stay of sentence until May 19 and ordered the youth taken to jail from the courtroom.

Mother's Day Privileges For San Quentin Men

Mothers will be allowed longer visits with their San Quentin Prison inmate sons than usual tomorrow since it is Mother's Day.

Associate warden James W. L. Park said there will be a church service for the mothers and their sons at 9 a.m. in both the Catholic and Protestant chapels, followed by a breakfast in the inmate dining room at 10:30 a.m.

Park said about 200 mothers are expected along with other relatives and friends, but only mothers will be allowed to go to the church services and breakfast.

The usual visit is one hour, but tomorrow's visit may amount to three or four hours, Parks said.

Folding chairs will be set up on the sidewalk outside the visiting room to accomodate the overflow crowd, he said.

Mill Valley Board To Discuss Buildup

The Mill Valley School District board will discuss future housing developments in Mill Valley and how they will affect school population in the district when it meets Monday at 8 p.m. in Park School.

Also on the agenda is consideration of the tentative 1970-71 eration of the tentative 1970-71 look at the budget at its last meeting that totaled $3,177,000 and matched item for item this year's estimated final budget.

College Alumni Pick Elliott As President

Thomas E. Elliott of Tiburon has been elected president of the College of Marin Alumni Association, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers are Robert J. Edwards of Novato, vice president; Robert A. Wooll of San Rafael, treasurer; and Judy Smith of San Rafael, secretary.

You can do it!

Are too many changes coming at you these days, and too fast?

You're not alone.

But you can learn to keep up with change, and to discover more good in change than you ever guessed.

Robert H. Mitchell, of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, says it takes willingness to let go of old ideas, and to learn about yourself as God's image. It may surprise you to learn how good you really are, how capable, and able to stay in tune with progress.

Stamps Are More Than Just Simply 'Pieces Of Paper'

By BRYCE W. ANDERSON

"Iceland Bs½, SS, cv $2.00."

This cryptic designation is quite clear to anyone who collects postage stamps.

It is a listing of a stamp issue from Iceland.

B3 is the number of the issue in Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue, which is used by most collectors in the United States. The "B" in the number means that it is what Scott calls a "semi-postal" — a stamp which paid postage for only part of the amount for which it was sold, with the additional charge usually going to some charity. The asterisk means this is an unused specimen — uncancelled and still with gum on the back. "SS" designates a "souvenir sheet" — a small sheet containing one or more stamps with a marginal description, issued more as a souvenir of some exhibit or event than for use in sending mail, although still valid for payment of postage. "Cv $2.00" means the catalogue value in Scott's catalogue is $2.

ANY OF THE group of collectors making up the Tamalpais Stamp Club, which meets twice each month at Redwood High School in Larkspur, could read all this into the brief description at a glance. Some of them, however, might not be much interested in the stamp (or more correctly, souvenir sheet of three stamps) which it describes.

People who collect "those little pieces of paper" do so for a variety of reasons, and in a variety of ways. Some (a decreasing percentage because of the multiplicity of new stamp issues) are "general collectors" who try to get as many different stamps as possible from every country. Most are specialists of one kind or another.

Scott's Iceland B3 was a souvenir sheet issued to commemroate Leif Eriksson Day (It is spelled Leifr Ericsson's Day in the Icelandic inscription) on Oct. 9, 1938. It contains a 30 aur stamp picturing a statue of Eriksson, a 40 aur showing a portion of the globe with his route from Iceland to America, and a 60 aur with a close-up of the statue.

GENERAL COLLECTORS would, of course, be interested in the item. So would collectors of stamps of the Scandinavian countries. So would "topical collectors" whose topic is either maps on stamps or globes on stamps. And so would those whose interest in stamps is tied to the history of America.

Many events in American history, from Columbus' landing in the West Indies to Apollo 11's landing on the moon, have been pictured on postage stamps of the United States. But for stamps relating to the earliest explorations of the continent, one must turn to the stamps of Iceland.

This is hardly surprising. It was from Iceland that Erik Thorwaldsson — banished for three years because he had killed two men in a fight over his treasured family heirlooms — set sail in 982 to explore the coast of Greenland, which across Davis Strait is some 100 miles nearer the coast of North America than is Watling Island in the Bahamas, the "San Salvador" where Columbus made his landfall in 1492 — just 510 years later.

"ERIK THE RED" spent three years exploring the Greenland coast, all the way up the west coast through Davis Strait and perhaps beyond, an accomplishment which the 20th Century explorer Fridtjof Nansen (shown on Scott's Norway 397, 398, B5, B6, B7, B8, B15, B16, B17, and B18) said proved Erik one of the boldest and most resourceful navigators of all times.

No stamp has commemorated Erik the Red's exploration, nor his return with a party of immigrants in the year 986 to plant the first colony of white men in the Western Hemisphere — a colony that survived for five centuries, and was dying out when Columbus set sail from Spain.

But Erik's son, Leif Eriksson, who became the first to land on the North American continent, has been commemorated by Iceland, for he also sailed from there.

BJARNI HERJOLFSSON, en route to one of Erik the Red's two colonies in Greenland, probably in 986, was blown off course and sighted new lands to the southwest, one of which appeared inviting. It was to find and explore them that Leif Eriksson set out in the year 1000, making his landing on Oct. 9 somewhere on the coast of New England.

Like his father before him, he sailed in an open ship with no deck, with oars to use when there was no wind for the sails, like that shown on Iceland 153.

Iceland has noted his discov-

A CLUB FOR PHILATELISTS

Stamp collectors, like other hobbyists, like to gather to swap information and items for their collections.

The Tamalpais Stamp Club, which includes members throughout Marin County, meets the second and fourth Fridays of each month at 8 p.m. in Room 118, Redwood High School.

Officers of the club are Donald M. McPherson of Corte Madera, president; Albert E. DeMellow of Corte Madera, vice president; Ragnar Thaning of San Rafael, treasurer, and Bryce W. Anderson of San Rafael, secretary.

ANCIENT SHIPS like those in which Erik the Red and his son Leif explored the New World appear on this stamp design — Iceland 404 — that was used also by Denmark, Norway, Finland and Sweden to demonstrate Nordic cooperation. Stamps Tell The Stories Of The Early Norse Explorers ery not only with souvenir sheet B3 but with No. 214, issued to commemorate the New York World Fair of 1939 and showing a different projection of his route on a portion of the globe.

ITS NUMBERS 215, 216, 229, 230 and 231, commemorate Thorfinn Karlsefni, another Icelander who in about the year 1010 planted the first European colony on the North American continent, in the region of Leif Eriksson's "Vinland" discovery.

There is a gap in the philatelic history of North America from the time of Karlsefni to that of Columbus. Iceland's explorations are indicated on only one more stamp, 391, which shows a modern map of Iceland and the coast of North America alongside one drawn about 1590 by Sigurdur Stefansson which has "Vinland" as a long peninsula jutting north almost to "Markland" (apparently Labrador).

THERE IS MORE to the story of Norse exploration of North America. Perhaps it will yet be commemorated on stamps — probably by Iceland, or by Greenland, which was closely involved with its history, rather than by the United States.

LITTLE GIRLS learn by their mistakes as they practice their marching and baton-handling in the twirling class at the Marinwood Community Center taught by Mindy Jones. Above, Megan O'Donnell seems to be telling herself: "If this is my left foot, then the other has just got to be my right foot." And at right, Tami Berthinier, looking ahead at the girl in front of her, hopes it is the other marcher, not herself, who is out of step.

SUSAN BURRELL seems just a bit dubious that she has understood her instructions from teacher Mindy Jones properly. But she nevertheless throws up her hands in the time-honored signal: "Strike up the band." The prospect of marching before a band, twirling and tossing a baton, is still an enticing opportunity to many little girls who spend long hours practicing for perfection.

Little Girls Still Like To Twirl Batons

By DON KEOWN

Isn't baton-twirling something of an anachronism — outdated and overly frivolous, even for children, in these serious times?

Not at all, replies Mindy Jones, one of Marin's most accomplished twirlers and now a teacher of the art of baton-handling at three locations.

The baton, she says, retains a strong appeal for little girls who delight in mastering the skill of twirling.

AND ADULTS and children alike still delight in watching parades and spectacles with lots of bands, preferably, of course, with pretty majorettes as their advance units.

Furthermore, says Mindy, children derive a real, practical benefit from the many hours they devote to baton-twirling.

"It makes much the same contribution to the development of coordination, poise and gracefulness that ballet does," says the young teacher. "It encourages nimble fingers as well as graceful arms and legs."

NOW 21, MINDY began her twirling at 11. Although she has lived most of her life in Marin County, she was at that time residing in Washington state.

"I read an article in a newspaper about twirlers and immediately was interested," she remembers.

So she began studying under a teacher named Marylou Ingram, and then marching with that instructor's junior drill unit, the Seattle Mariners.

HER FIRST public appearance with that baton corps, she recalls, was in the Tacoma Daffodil Festival parade. "And what a thrill that was for me! I thought it was fantastic!"

Older and more experienced, Mindy began marching with the crack Seattle Seafair Pirateers, featured traditionally in Seattle Seafair events, a gala and drawn-out celebration.

"Sometimes," she says, "we were in as many as three parades in one day."

SHE BEGAN taking lessons from an Ericka Tatsumi.

At 15, Mindy placed in the 1965 Washington state baton-twirling championships in Seattle.

Another highlight of those years was a week's attendance at a baton camp at Sun Valley, Idaho. "I earned the scholarship by selling the most Seafair skipper pins that year," she says. "We twirled batons eight hours a day. And I thought it fascinating."

WORKING with the girls in her baton-twirling class at the Marinwood Community Center, 21-year-old Mindy Jones demonstrates for the young pupils the proper technique for handling the baton along with the drum majorette's strut. A twirler since age 11 and formerly the Terra Linda High School Band's head twirler, Mrs. Jones conducts classes at three Marin locations and stoutly defends the skill against charges of frivolity. (Independent-Journal photos by Alfred M. Arn)

BACK IN Marin County, Mindy began twirling for Terra Linda High School. She was solo and head twirler there in 1966 and 1967.

As a high school junior, she also began her first teaching, offering classes at her home.

Mindy is now Mrs. Gary Jones, Her husband works for Blyth & Co. Inc., the San Francisco investment firm.

HER PARENTS reside in Marin, her mother, Betty Hays, in San Rafael, and her father, Paul Hays, in Santa Venetia.

Mindy has regular classes at the Marinwood Community Center and at the Belrose Studio Theater, San Rafael. The Belrose group is just beginning.

Her students range from 5 through 12.

AND AT NOVATO High School, she instructs teen-agers in baton-twirling in a class coordinated with that school's marching band program.

The Marinwood group will be performing May 16 at Santa Rosa in that city's Rose Parade,

Baton-Twirling Class Helps Girls To Improve Coordination, Poise

at Marinwood May 23 in their home community's May Day festivities, and at Novato June 20 during the Western Weekend celebration.

Following the May 23 parade, the Marinwood twirlers will sponsor an old-fashioned strawberry social as a fund-raising project to obtain money to send their outstanding performers to a baton camp this summer at Big Trees State Park in Santa Cruz County.

AT THAT same festival, the Novato High School twirlers will operate a kissing booth to raise money for their own camp fund. They have been selling cookies and pickles for that same purpose.

Mindy, herself, plans to attend two summer camps this year at Santa Cruz and Santa Barbara. At the latter she will complete the earning of her United States Twirling Association teacher's certificate.

THE YOUNG teacher admits that baton-twirling must compete today with many other activities for the attention of the youngsters. Therefore, the ranks of potential twirlers admittedly have been thinned from the days when every little girl aspired to prance before a marching band.

"But," says Mindy, "once they take it up, today's children are as dedicated as any earlier generation. They stick it out."

They usually begin, she adds, because their friends are involved "and they want to be with their friends."

ONCE-A-WEEK instruction sessions last from 45 minutes to an hour, depending on the ages of the pupils.

"Holding the attention of some 20 small girls for 45 minutes is just about my limit," pert, pretty, freckle-faced Mindy admits with a smile.

The highlight of any practice comes when the girls are permitted to toss their batons high into the air and attempt to catch them on their downward course.

"THEY ALL look forward to the time I turn them loose outdoors and let them practice their throwing and catching," their teacher says. Enthusiasm soars still higher when the instructor offers a candy bar prize for the day's best catch.

Mindy says she has noted cases of remarkable improvement in coordination among some of her students, particularly in the use of their hands.

Baton-twirling, says Mrs. Jones, is "like any other performing art. A fancy costume is not necessary. But it helps to get the girls into the proper spirit and to spark their interest."

LITTLE GIRLS, she adds, have an unchanging liking for bright and pretty dress.

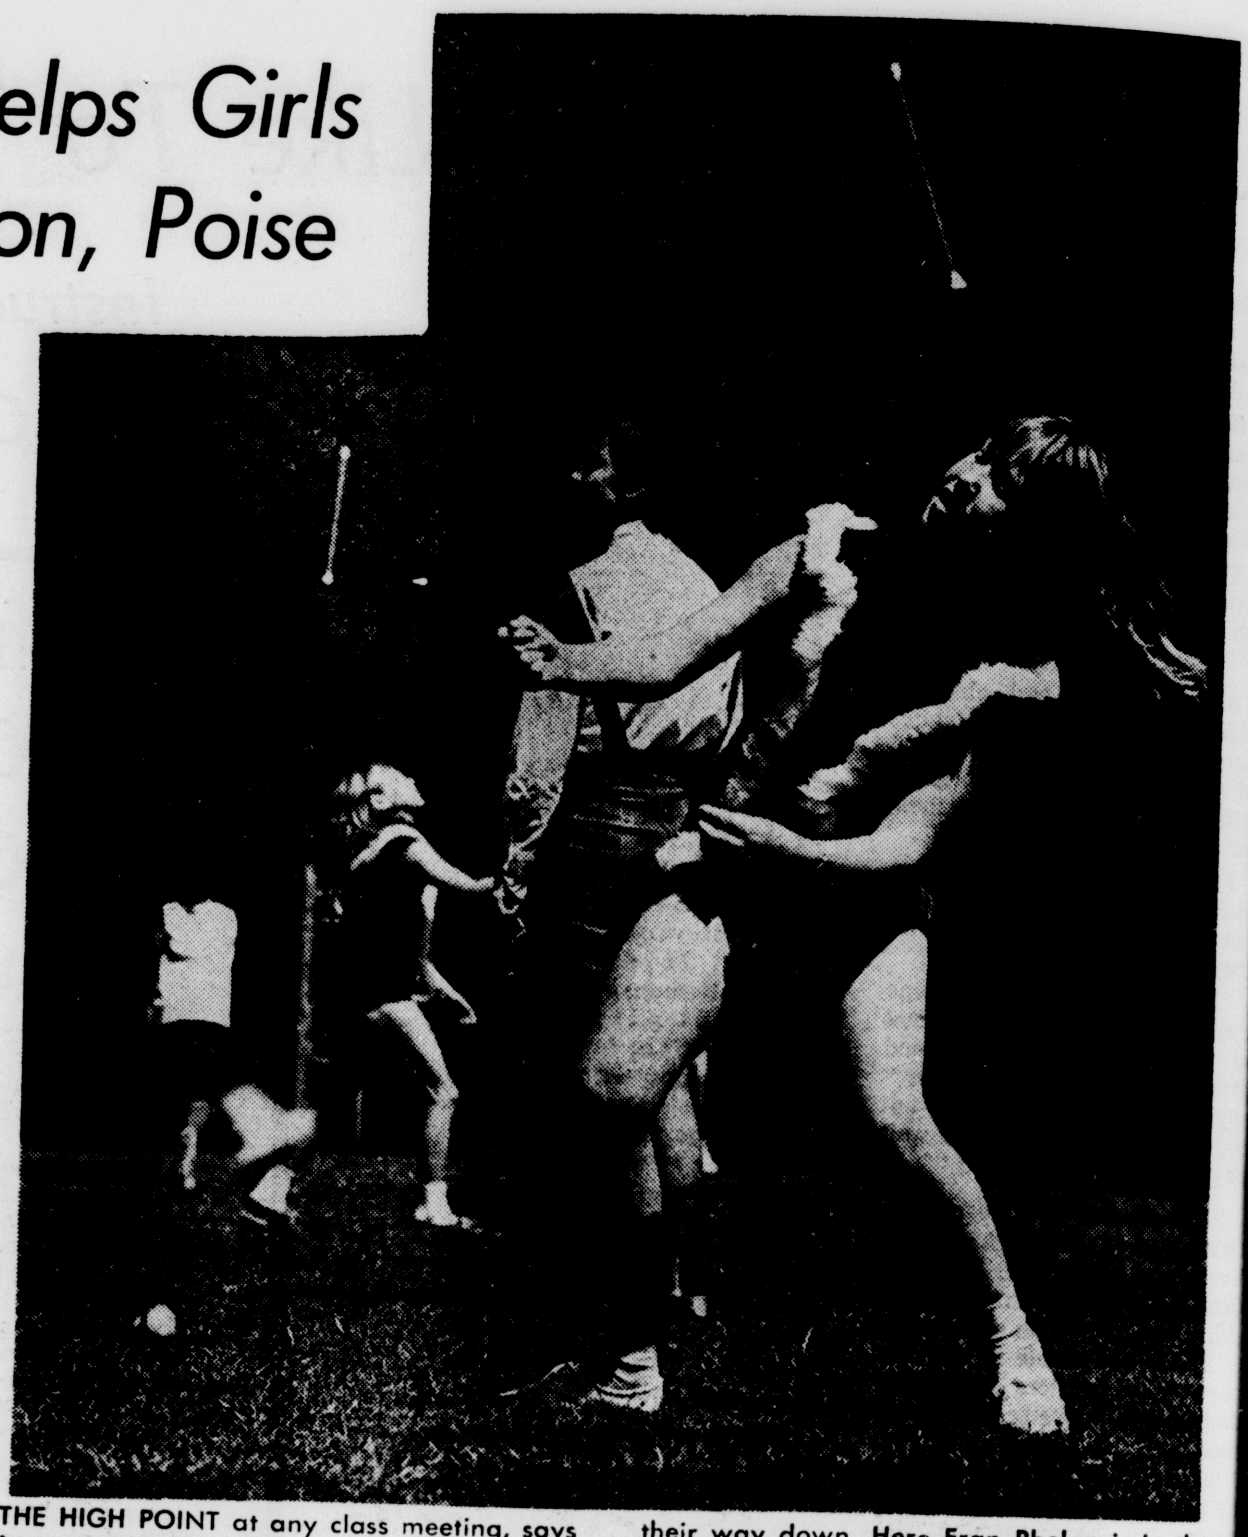

"For that matter, so do big girls."

Mindy, herself, is hardly big. She stands five feet three inches tall and weighs about 115 pounds.

"That is about average for a mature twirler," she says.

THEN ADDS: "But of course, if you are going to be a strutter, longer legs are nice."

Mindy Jones teaches strutting and all the other majorette and twirler steps along with baton twirling and throwing in her classes. And she does so with the firm belief that she is helping her young charges through that stage — "the awkward years" — when arms, hands, legs and feet don't always respond quickly or exactly to the desires and needs of the child's mind and body.

THE HIGH POINT at any class meeting, says instructor Mindy Jones, comes when the girls are permitted to toss their batons high into the air and practice catching the wands on their way down. Here Fran Phelan is in the foreground, Cary Gordon in the background, and Mindy Jones is in between, keeping a watchful eye on the flying batons.

THE INITIAL CONFUSION of the opening of a class session is over, and things have begun to jell as the girls settle into the routine. "When things are going as they should," says Mindy Jones, "it makes me and the girls all feel good." This is one of those times at the Marinwood Community Center.

Camping At The Edge Of Point Reyes

Olema Ranch Facilities Only Yards From Seashore

By DON KEOWN

For three years Larry Marks cultivated his 14-acre parcel at Olema as an artichoke field, and he lost money every year.

Even though he had an Italian helper who labored 18 hours a day among the artichokes, "the farm was just too small to be operated economically."

And so, when his books at the end of that third year showed him $700 short of breaking even on his crop, he decided to convert from artichokes to tourists.

CONSTRUCTION of the Olema Ranch Campground on the land next door to Olema's Roman Catholic church and only some 500 yards from the boundaries of the Point Reyes National Seashore began April 5, 1969.

On July 25, 1969, it opened for business.

In its first year, it served 7,000 people from 49 of the 50 states and from 11 foreign countries, drawn there mainly by the proximity of the Point Reyes Seashore and its recreational opportunities.

MARKS' PAYING guests make the Olema Ranch their headquarters, staying in tents, campers and trailers, while they explore the surrounding countryside, beaches, mountains, forests and villages.

And Marks, looking forward to an even bigger second season, finds his new career of campground operator more satisfying as well as more profitable than his earlier brief fling as an artichoke grower.

For one thing, it takes Marks back to his youth when as the son of a Yosemite National Park Co. employee he lived in Yosemite for five years in the 1920s.

"I HAVE ALWAYS enjoyed being and working outdoors," he says.

Actually, Marks spent a good many of his earlier years in the cabins of airliners.

He was for 23 years with Trans World Airlines and three years with World Airlines as navigator, and during that period he lived a year in Italy and nine years in Egypt. He seized that opportunity to do a great deal of camping, hunting and fishing around the historic Red Sea and to participate on a safari into the Sudan.

But his favorite base during those years was California.

"AND WHEN I was flying out of New York, I commuted from California, arranging my flight schedule so that I could remain out here as many days as possible each month."

It was while living on the Peninsula that he used to visit West Marin, driving past the artichoke field at the edge of Olema.

In 1961 he purchased that land as an investment, but under his ownership it was to lie fallow for the next several years.

IN 1963, MARKS, like other airliner navigators, was "automated" out of his job.

In 1966 he began the planting and cultivation of artichokes on his Olema property. And it was with some misgivings that he eventually abandoned that project. "It was the last artichoke field in Marin County," he says, "and seemed to me to be a part of the county's heritage. But I couldn't go on subsidizing history."

At the time he had acquired the Olema land in 1961, a future campground site was no part of his plans.

"I KNEW NOTHING about any plans for a Point Reyes National Seashore," he says.

But now the national seashore

Reyes National Seashore last year on a 14-acre parcel that had previously been an unprofitable artichoke truck garden. (Independent-Journal photos)

AN EARLY SPRING look through the entrance to the Olema Ranch Campground shows the premises far from crowded. But Memorial Day weekend and thereafter will find the camping facilities at capacity or near-capacity use through the summer. Last year there were visitors from 49 states and 11 foreign countries.

was a reality, and Marks was the owner of 14 acres located conveniently nearby that cou'd no longer be profitably farmed.

"I guess the idea for a campground was a natural one," he says, "considering my Yosemite background. And I had always enjoyed taking my boys up into the Sierra camping and fishing. This had helped make me aware of the tremendous demand for camping and recreation sites and facilities. People were craving the outdoor experience."

MARKS FIRST looked into various franchise operations.

"But these," he says, "I didn't like. They were too stereotyped. Basically, I wanted buildings, a landscape and a general feeling that complimented the national park atmosphere. And I wanted to serve family-style campers."

Olema Ranch Campground began functioning with 30 "full hook-up" facilities for recreation vehicles providing sewer, electric and water service connections, and 36 sites for camping tents, along with the necessary restrooms and tile showers, complete to hot water and flush toilets.

IT WAS NECESSARY to install 5,000 feet of underground piping for the water system. And since the Olema water system lacked the capacity to serve the campground needs normally, Marks also put in a 10,000-gallon reserve tank into which he draws water during the night when it is not being used by the townspeople.

Olema Ranch Campground also has its own system to pump the water and maintain pressure.

Solid wastes go into a septic tank and affluents into an evaporation pond.

MARKS SAYS Marin County health, building and planning officials were extremely helpful in the proper planning of his facilities — "particularly Bill Desmond."

Because it had been an artichoke field, the Olema property was virtually treeless. Marks planted some 1,000 trees and shrubs, sticking as close as possible to species natural to the area such as Bishop pine and the coastal redwood.

Marks has another 34 potential camping spaces awaiting development on the property. The utilities are already available. But first he will build another bathhouse.

"THESE WILL give me 100 sites on 14 acres," he says, "which is actually mobile home density, and considerably less congested than most campgrounds. In parks, camping density sometimes runs as high as 20 to 25 per acre.

"But one of the reasons people come to Point Reyes is to get away from the crowds. And I intend to give them some breathing space."

When Olema Ranch Campground began operating last summer, there were two other privately-owned camping sites functioning in West Marin — at Merrill Lawson's 200-space Lawson's Landing at Dillon Beach, and at Marconi Cove belonging to a group that includes Morgan Noble and Blair McDonald.

BOTH ARE near splendid outdoor areas. But neither enjoys the very close proximity to Point Reyes National Seashore that is offered by Olema Ranch Campground.

The seashore itself has three camping areas of 12 sites each within its boundaries. But these are available only to backpackers, on a reservations basis.

Within the seashore, there are no overnight spaces for recreational vehicles.

ALTHOUGH Marks opened his new campground with a minimum of publicity, 37 of its spaces were occupied its first night. And business continued brisk through the summer vacation period, so that by Sept. 1 the 7,000-visitor figure had been attained.

Business fell off sharply with the resumption of school and remained slow through the fall, winter and early spring.

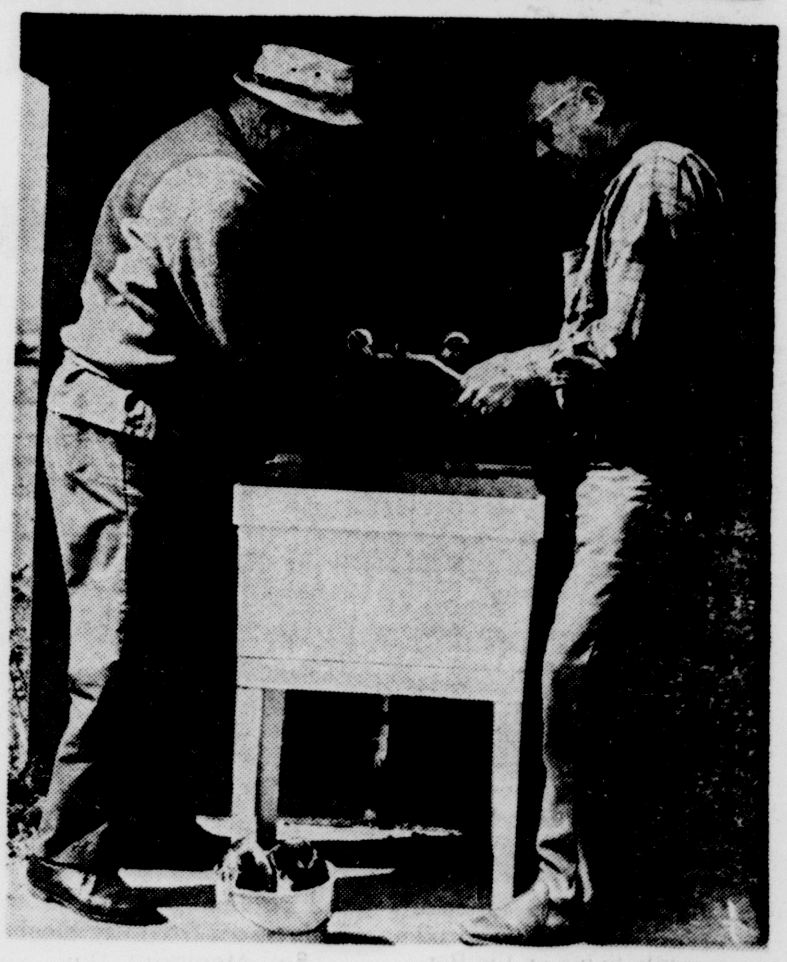

Nevertheless, Marks plans to operate his camp on a year-around basis.

EVEN ON THE coldest, gloomiest, wettest winter days, there were still campers and trailers on the campground.

"Some of them didn't seem to mind how hard it rained," says Marks. "They were just happy to get away from the city for awhile."

All ages from babes in arms to octogenarians are represented among the Olema Ranch campers — "including a surprising number of young people, many of them college students," says Marks.

THE OLDER people generally stay in campers and trailers, the younger ones in the tents.

Women, particularly, enjoy the conveniences and comforts of the recreation vehicle. "Much of the appeal of the better campers and trailers is in the comforts they afford the women," Marks has noted.

And while some of the campers come from great distances, many also drive over from as near as San Rafael and Mill Valley just to spend the weekend next-door to Point Reyes.

WHAT DO THEY do to occupy themselves?

First and foremost, there is the marvelous hiking over the national seashore trails.

From the park headquarters, there are some 40 miles of nature-rich hiking trails open for their exploration.

They can visit and loll on or comb the several beaches in the area.

THEY CAN RIDE horses that can be rented from the two stables that are within a mile and a half of Olema Ranch Campground.

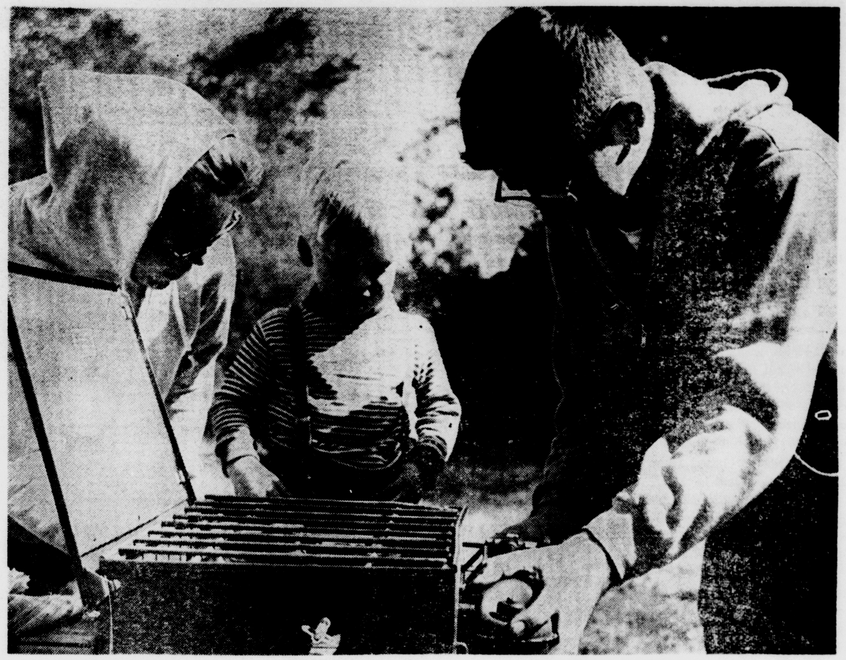

They can fish on Tomales Bay or elsewhere, or enjoy boating. Their craft can be rented.

For the Markses, the campground is a family enterprise. Wife Jean, a former airline hostess, and the children all lend Larry a helping hand.

THE TWO oldest children are in college, the boy at Chico State and the girl at the University of California in Berkeley. At home are 16, 12 and 11-year-olds.

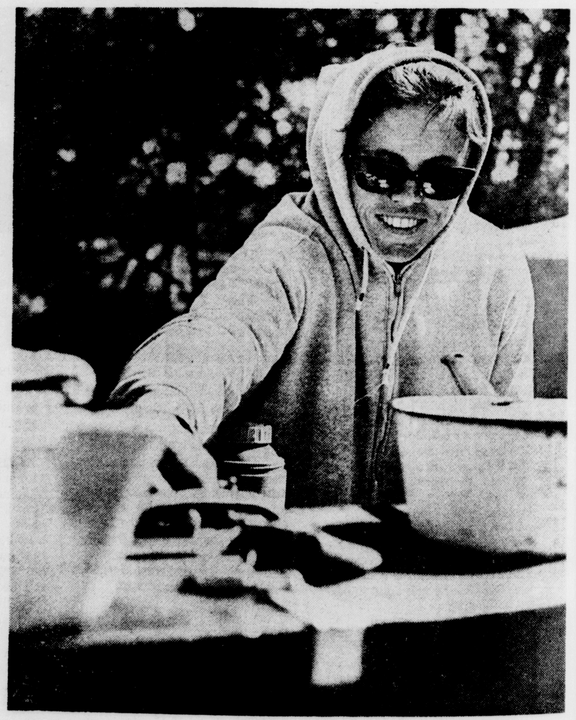

For the Markses, another busy season will begin this Memorial Day. From then on, they will be hosts to travelers come to enjoy the wonders of Point Reyes. Where artichokes once grew, tents will be pitched and trailers parked. And these visitors will refresh their spirits and satisfy their thirsts for recreation and relaxation in the rural and wilderness settings which man still craves and requires for his physical and mental well-being.

CAMPING IS a family activity. Mr. and Mrs. John Sprowl and small son Thomas gather around the campstove as meal time draws near.

FOOD TASTES especially good outdoors, and little Michella Lax from San Francisco derives maximum enjoyment from her lunch eaten in the open air at Olema Ranch Campground.

EVEN COOKING seems more fun when done out of doors. And here Mrs. John Sprowl of San Jose smiles as she goes about preparing something tasty for her hungry husband and son.

CREEKS AND MARSHES around the Olema Ranch Campground abound in nature life, including bullfrogs, of interest to small boys and girls. These lads are, from the foreground, Doug Cochran, Brian Law and Marty Cochran.

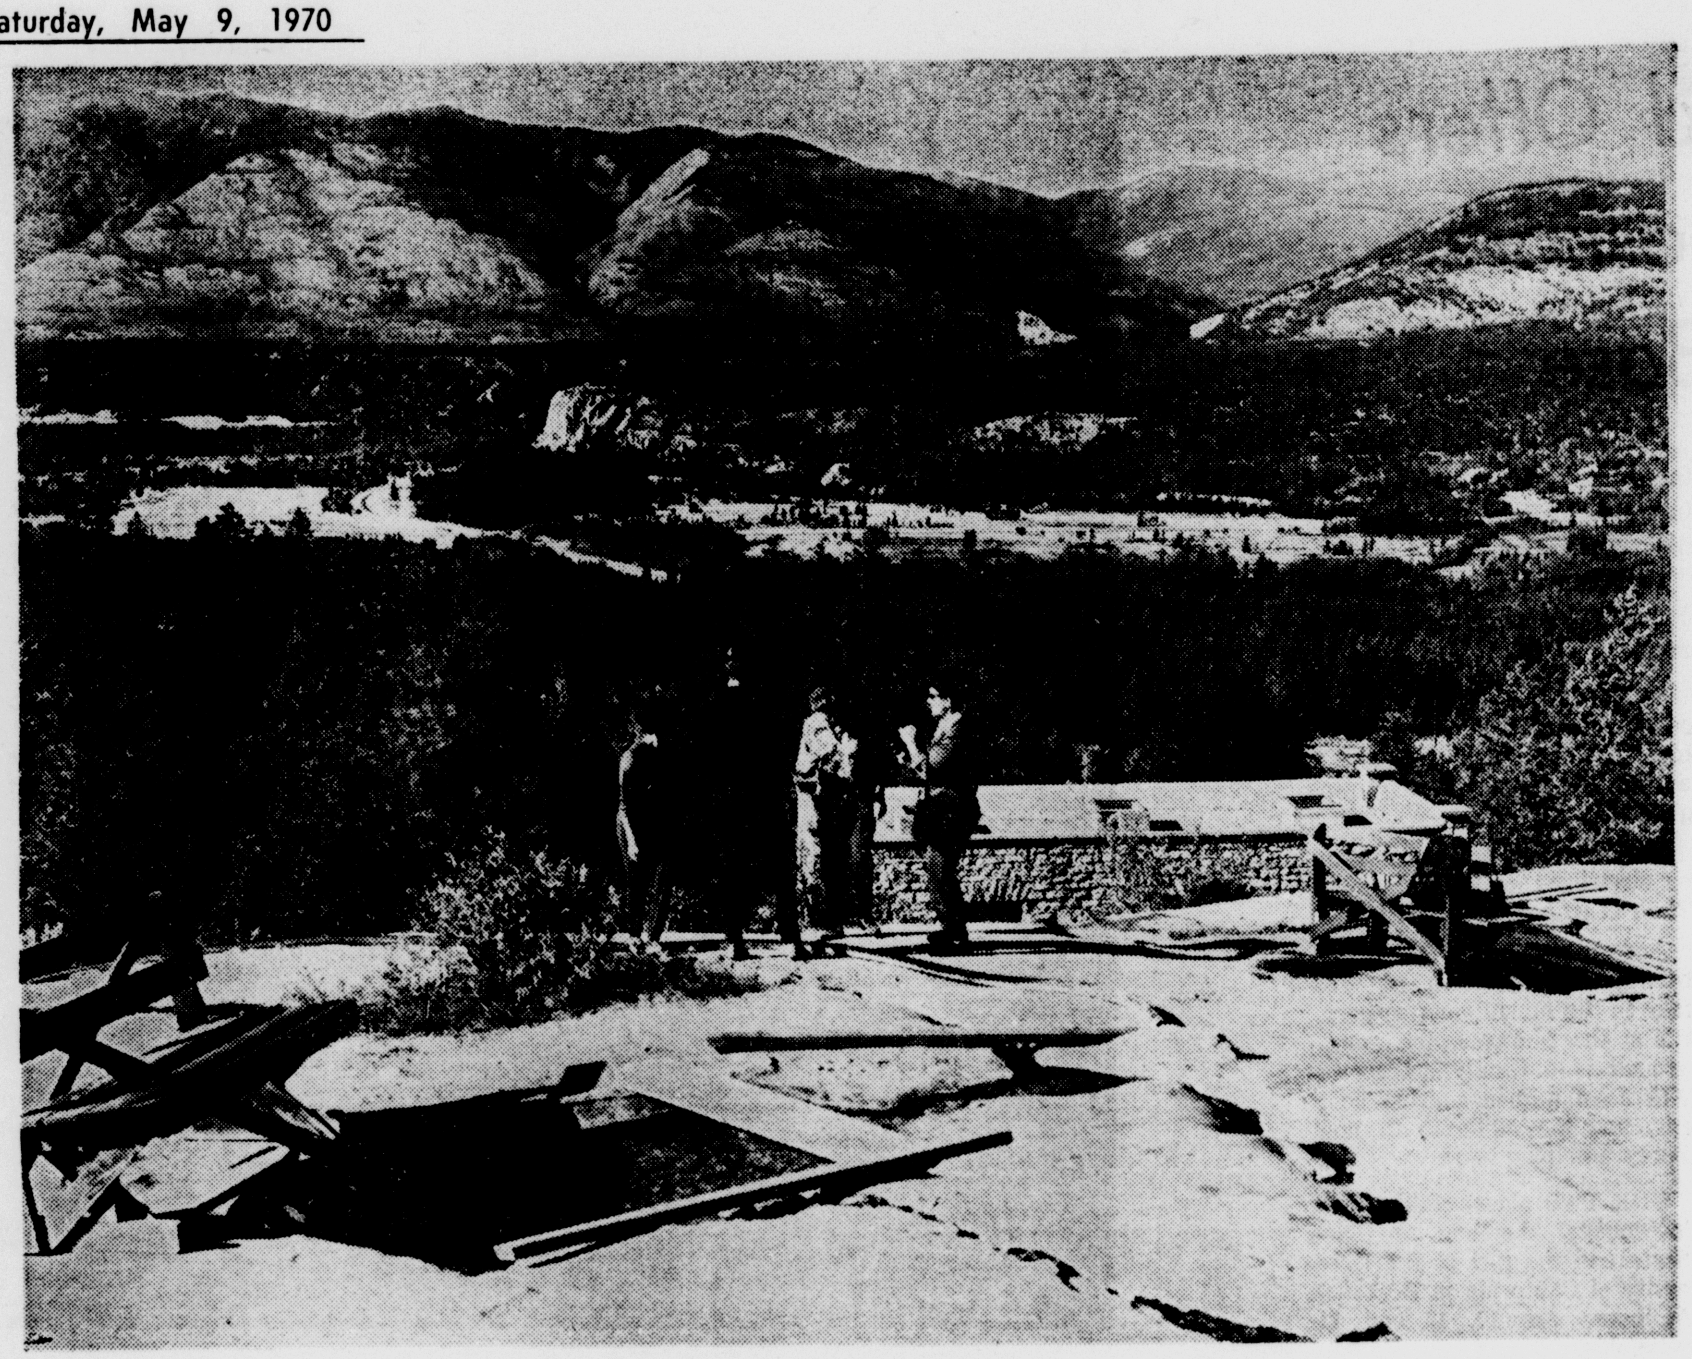

EVEN THE FAMILY pet can enjoy camping. So Michelle Lax brought along her cat from San Francisco. And the pet makes the most of its new freedom in the wide open spaces of the Olema Ranch Campground. (Independent-Journal photos)

THESE NATURAL HOT BATHS that overlook the picturesque Columbia Valley in western Canada provide therapy and relaxation for the weary traveler. The snow-like formations shown in the foreground are actually mineral deposits from the hot springs.

B.C. Waters That Smoke And Soothe

Before the white man crossed the Rockies, Indians had discovered on America's West Coast what they named Smoking Waters.

Today their smoking waters hot springs have new names but they are used now as they were by the Indians, for curative relaxation.

British Columbia is home for nearly all of Canada's hot springs with the mountainous western belt rich in resort areas featuring hot pools and spas.

The waters of these springs are of surface origin, geologists tell us.

RAIN WATER or snow falling on the mountains seeps downward through cracks, fissures and faults. The water becomes heated as it comes in contact with hot rock masses at great depths. Steam generated by this heat rises through cracks in the rocks, condenses into water and gushes out as hot springs.

It was the discovery of hot springs bubbling from the slopes of the Rocky Mountains that led to the establishment of Canada's first national park.

Fairmont Hot Springs in the Kootenays is one of the many British Columbia resorts that have sprung up around these magnificent hot springs. A 2,000 acre development in the Windermere Valley, open year 'round, Fairmont has four pools where the odorless mineral water ranges in temperature from 85 to 118 degrees.

ALSO FEATURED are private mineral swirlpools and therapy as well as natural baths carved from rocks where water temperatures vary from 112 to 118 degrees.

On easily-traveled highways, Fairmont is just 187 miles from Calgary, 80 miles north of Cranbrook near the B.C.-U.S. border, or a 100-mile jaunt from Golden on Highway 95.

Accommodations at Fairmont range from luxury suites to rustic cabins. Trailer sites and camping areas are available for the mobile set.

Twenty-two miles north on Highway 93, Kootenay National Park features Radium Hot Springs, another 12-month resort. A hot pool with 110 to 114 degrees is world renowned for its therapeutic use. The warm pool at 82 degrees comfortably accommodates more active swimmers.

Two hotels, 34 motels, government and private camp grounds at Radium round out facilities to suit every type of traveller.

Just 30 miles north of Nelson a smaller hot springs resort called Ainsworth overlooks Kootenay Lake. Steam baths in natural caves and swimming in an odorless mineral pool are attractions here.

Not every B. C. hot spring has been developed. Some have been left natural and are available to those seeking hot pools off the beaten path.

ONE SUCH HOT spring is situated at Sheep Creek, 40 miles outside Kimberley on the road to White Swan Lake in the Rockies. Another can be found on Ram Creek Road just 30 miles from Kimberley.

Both of these hot springs just seep out of the mountainside.

Perhaps the most famous of B. C. hot springs resorts is Harrison Hot Springs, located just 78 miles east of Vancouver in the beautiful Fraser Valley. The area features a hot springs spa located in the 288-unit Harrison Hot Springs hotel complex.

The golfer, fisherman, hiker, boating enthusiast as well as the swimmer will each find his sport available here.

Motels as well as trailer sites round out the accommodations at Harrison.

IN NORTHERN British Columbia, 15 miles from Terrace, Lakelse Hot Springs features three hot mineral pools. Other attractions include hunting, fishing and riding. Nearby fossil beds along Copper River Road, seven miles east of Terrace are easily accessible by car.

Still further north near the B. C.-Youkon border Laird Hot Springs is located about one-half mile from Mile 496.5. Here water temperatures touch the 115 degree mark.

Accommodations are located one mile away at the Laird River Hotel.

Canada's western shores also boast hot springs. Hot Springs Cove lies about 25 miles west of Tofino by water. The cove stands at the entrance of Sidney Inlet and someone has to be found with a boat willing to travel the 25 miles between the islands and up the inside channel. But what a trip!

ONCE ON LAND a hike of about a mile over the trail and through the woods brings you to the hot spring pools. Springing from the earth the water emerges at 183 degrees. However, by the time it reaches the several shallow pools around the springs the water is relaxing and pleasant.

Visitors planning to "take the waters" at any B. C. hot springs resort will receive additional information about the area by writing the British Columbia Government Department of Travel Industry in Victoria or by contacting the resort direct.

"What Made My House Coat Stretch?"

Your house coat has a design which is produced by the use of a yarn with a rubber core. This rubber yarn draws the outer fabric together to produce the design on the outer surface. Cleaning in dry cleaning fluid caused the rubber to deteriorate. As this occurs the yarn relaxed and the house coat increased in size. In some instances the rubber yarn will shrink, also causing dissatisfaction.

You should have been warned about these possibilities before your housecoat was cleaned. The stretching to which you object cannot be overcome.

London's For The Youthful

The Travel Pages

By LUCINDA L. FRANKS

LONDON (UPI)—The young American looking for a good time in London can find it just about anywhere—from the sawdust strewn pubs of East London to the bright lights of Picadilly Circus.

On a Saturday, there's the King's Road in Chelsea where the dolly-birds (teeny-boppers) emerge in see-through blouses and watertight velveteen trousers. They cram into mirror-walled boutiques with rotating floors and blaring pop music.

ON A SUNDAY, movers, hippies, students and longhairs congregate in spacious Hyde Park for a free outdoor pop concert, or gather around the soapboxes at Speaker's Corner to hear anarchists, preachers and ordinary gripers, or just lounge on the grass with guitars and beer.

One reason for London's popularity is price. Student hostels charge as little as 10 shillings ($1.20) a night. At Sussex Gardens and the West Side, you can find bed-and-breakfast hotels for 25 shillings ($3).

The cost of dining out also can be reasonable. London's myriad Indian restaurants offer a huge plate of rice pilau and curry for about 10 shillings ($1.20). For those who shrink from hot, spicy dishes, Italian bistros usually are good, inexpensive and at almost every corner.

The old fish and chips shops (French fried plaice and potatoes wrapped in vinegar-soaked newspaper) have virtually disappeared. Now the meccas of cheap food are pubs (sausages and pork pies for pennies) and the chain of Wimpy Bars (hamburgers for two bob, 24 cents). Be ready, though, for the slight difference in taste between English and American beef.

THE PUB IS one of England's great institutions, a place where people go to meet people. A stranger may sit down at your table and buy you a drink. You'll be expected to buy the next round. Closing time: 11 p.m.

East London is full of pubs which have barely changed for a century. Dirty Dick's, where butchers and fishermen gather for an after-work pint, has wooden tables, exposed beams and a fat, friendly bartender.

On the southeastern Thames, the lively Prospect of Whitby, famous for dockworker brawls, has beer kegs for tables and an ancient slot machine. At night it is shoulder-tight with fishermen and young tourists trading pints and drinking songs.

In West London, there are a variety of pubs on King's Road and Brompton Road which cater to young people and where singles, male and female, feel welcome. Off Hyde Park Corner there's the (happily ghost ridden) Grenadier. Finches, on Fulham Road, where beer is spilt on a sawdust-strewn floor, is a popular haunt of revolutionaries and hippies.

For the more conservative, The Hereford Arms nearby has a carpet and a clientele of law and medical students.

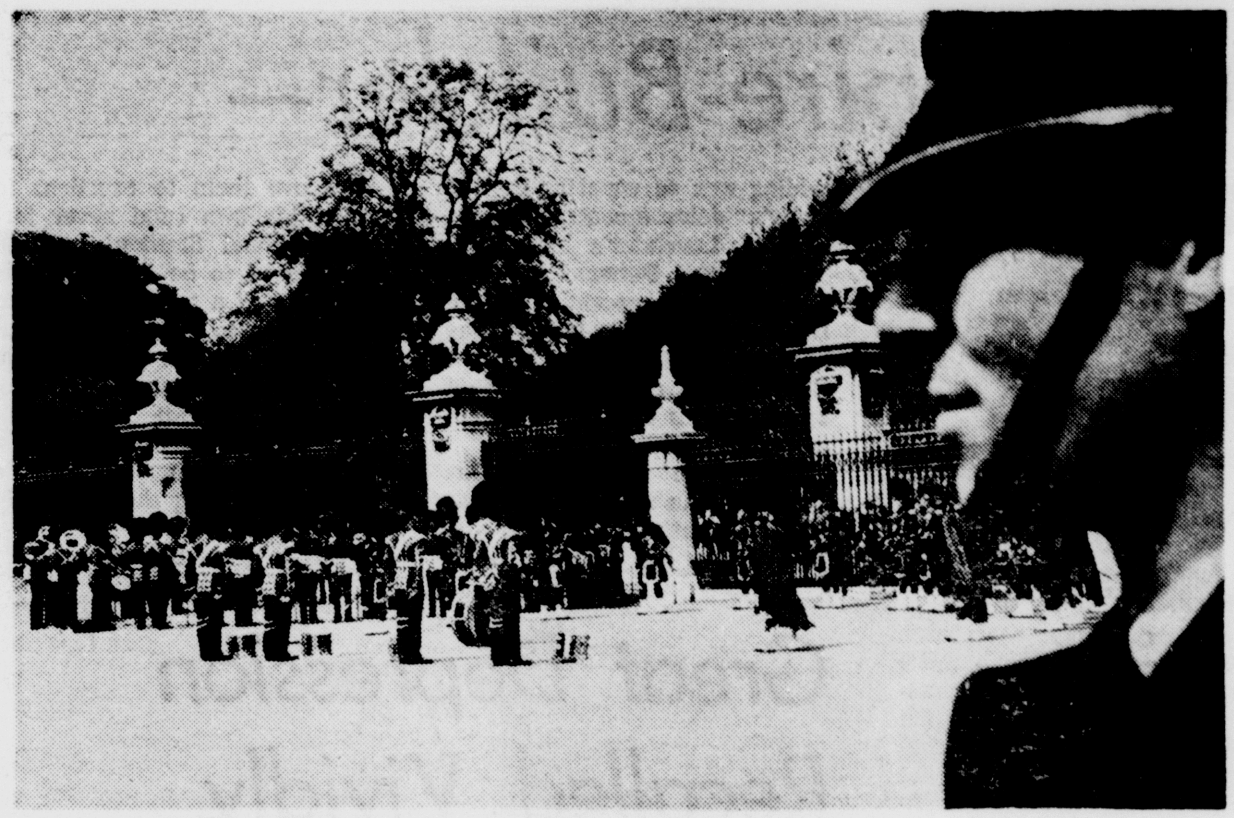

Discotheques, open until 2 or 3 a.m., generally are expensive, but your passport can get you into most at half price, usually about 10 shillings ($1.20). Try to do your drinking beforehand, as drinks usually are double at discotheques.

IF YOU CAN splurge, sample the food and atmosphere at The Elizabethan Room, Kensington Gore Hotel. Its banquet room boasts long oak tables, a roaring fire and minstrels. For a flat five pounds ($12) you devour a great leg of lamb or slab of beef with your fingers, toast fellow diners with mead and claret, sing lusty 16th Century ballads, and are served by "wenches" in low-cut frocks.

Two of London's swinging nightspots are The Roundhouse, an avant garde theater, and The Marquee, a pop club where the Rolling Stones and Jimi Hendrix got their start. The Roundhouse, a converted barn, offers Jean Genet plays, living theater happenings and pop concerts.

There are other places to meet people. Many Anglo-American friendships have begun on the steps of the statue of Eros in Picadilly Circus (London's Times Square). In summer Eros is covered with hippies and roving students from early morning to late at night.

Other favorite meeting grounds are the weekly street markets such as Portobello Road, a mile-long market where antique dealers and old clothes merchants put up stalls each Saturday stocked with old silver, way-out Victorian clothes and Army surplus coats. Young buskers (street musicians) with guitars are at every corner.

THERE ARE THINGS to do and see in London that are inexpensive, and some that are even free — including much of the country's pageantry that appeals to young as well as older Americans. A popular event is the changing of the guard ceremony at Buckingham Palace show here. It take place with military precision daily. (Photo by Japan Air Lines)

American Steaks Pass Test With French Taste Expert

By PETER A. GASKELL

PARIS (UPI)—The American steak ranks high in the gastronomic world.

The assurance came this week from Jean Lasbugues, 59, one of the dozen highly trained and highly demanding French inspectors who compile the Michelin Guide hotel and restaurant ratings.

Lasbugues, who has 35 years of food, wine and hotel sampling behind him, went to New York to rate restaurants for Michelin's New York City guide which came out in 1968.

"I found American steaks just excellent," Lasbugues said. "Like all Frenchmen who go to the United States, I was most impressed by American beef, and one-pound steaks are not something we are used to."

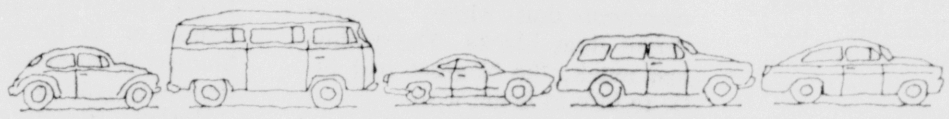

Lasbugues said he also enjoyed the variety of seafood available in the 60 New York restaurants he tested in his month long visit.

"During my visit I sampled big, middle-sized, and small restaurants—even the sidewalk automats—to get an idea of how you can eat in New York. I must say you can eat pretty well because there's such a range of restaurants, including many good ones where they serve foreign cuisine."

Lasbugues had some reservations about the steaks, however. "They are so thick that they need very careful preparation. A number of cooks grill them so that the topside is carbonized and the underside cold."

I asked him for a gourmet's comparison with French steaks—often recognized as the best in the world.

"The American steak is very good, though a little fattier than ours—it must be the result of how the cattle are raised. I would say that French beef, Charollais for instance, has a more subtle taste."

An Empire-Builder—

THE GREAT PERSUADER by David Lavender; Doubleday, 377 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The "Big Four" of the Central and Southern Pacific railroads are the scapegoats of California history. Their single-minded drive for a monopoly of rail transportation to the lustily-growing Golden State made them obvious targets for miner and muckraker, plowman and politician.

In fact, the "four merchants of Sacramento" were no more venal and grasping than promoters of other railroads of the period. If they were more successful than most in raiding the treasury and running roughshod over the rights of the little man, it was largely because of the ultra-practical politics of one of them: Collis P. Huntington, the "great persuader."

It was Huntington whose dream grew larger and larger. It was he who often drove the others — Leland Stanford, Mark Hopkins, and Charles Crocker — to expand their own dreams. It was he who bought steel rails and politicians, who boasted and wheedled — and perjured if necessary — to get the funds to keep the road a-building.

When the Big Four in their Nob Hill castles ruled California, and looked down patronizingly on those who once had been their equals, it was largely because he had never let them give up.

In Huntington's view, the Southern Pacific Co. was California's greatest benefactor. It was easy for him to think so. Like a lesser tycoon of the later automobile age he could believe that "what is good for the railroads is good for America" — and particularly what is good for the road that the Big Four built.

He and his partners raided the treasury. But they did so for a purpose that had been declared prime national policy. They helped to unite the nation. And who can say their treasury raiding was as venal as that of today's "defense contractors?"

David Lavender's biography, "The Great Persuader," was written with cooperation of the Huntington family. But he has not spared the seamy side of Huntington's career — and of other careers with which it was entwined.

The figure that emerges is that of a man who would stop at nothing to attain his ends, who fought with his partners while he drove them to exertions to equal his own (and never forgave Leland Stanford because he refused to be driven). It is the story of a man who stooped sometimes to small things, but did so to achieve great things. Huntington emerges as the prototype of the 19th Century empire-builder: shrewd, ruthless, with few scruples, but capable of accomplishing the seemingly impossible.

This is great biography.

Great Depression Recalled Vividly

HARD TIMES by Studs Terkel; Pantheon, 462 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Bob Raab.

This "oral history of the Great Depression" packages the impressions and recollections of some 200 people. Most of them suffered, some had little personal tribulation, a few even benefited by the economic collapse.

Only a small number of the narrators are well-known — people like Cesar Chavez and C. Wright Patman. The majority are obscure figures, some are memorable for enduring years of bitter poverty and surviving with spirit intact.

Terkel presents his material in a seemingly artless, off-hand form. This permits a wide range of opinion about the causes and effects of the depression, much of it contradictory. Notable is the fact that most people claim they've forgotten about the depression long ago. This is hard to believe.

Thirty years of prosperity since 1940 (the advent of World War II ended the ten-year Depression) have healed the wounds, but the scars are still there in the subconscious.

Terkel's people talk about their experience on farms, in business, as social workers, politicians, children and parents. They describe personal experiences of poverty such as living in shacks and feeling grateful for being spared life in rusted auto bodies or caves—where some families lived! Negroes recount their experiences; some comment that whites suffered worse than blacks. The whites lost much; the Negroes had little to lose to begin with.

Theatrical producer Herman Shumlin ironically prospered during the depression. He describes a chance encounter with a once-successful cohort: ". . .I grabbed hold of him. There was a deadness in his eyes. . .he didn't want to talk to me. He lived in perpetual shame. This was, to me, the most cruel thing about the depression . . . accepting the idea that you were just no good."

Virginia Durr, a pioneer in the civil rights battle, describes the effects upon poor whites and blacks in Alabama. "Have you ever seen a child with rickets? Shaking as with palsy. No proteins, no milk. And the companies pouring milk into the gutters. People with nothing to wear, and they were plowing up cotton. People with nothing to eat, and they killed the pigs. . .I think the reason for the gap between the black militants (today) and the young white radicals is that the black kids are much more conscious of the thin edge of poverty."

Cesar Chavez describes the life of itinerant Mexican-American families, including his, as they barely existed while moving throughout the Southwest picking crops.

Terkel offers no conclusions about the depression. He merely presents excerpts from the monologues of a fascinating array of people. The effect is visceral, exciting reading—unforgettable vignettes of the biggest economic disaster in our history.

Most of the commentators agreed that few people understood what was happening to the nation or to themselves. They blamed themselves for much of their deprivation.

Herbert Hoover comes in for surprisingly little criticism, considering the rage his name invoked in the '30s. Franklin Roosevelt was a national hero for several years after his election in 1932 to the presidency. Even big business welcomed firm measures like the Bank Holiday. The Securities Exchange Commission curbed excesses in a stock market that had pushed a shaky economy off the cliff. But the ardor for Roosevelt has cooled in retrospect.

Terkel's book is as valuable as, and far more readable than, other definitive works on the depression such as John Kenneth Galbraith's "The Great Crash of 1929." It has much of the style and appeal of Oscar Lewis' "The Children of Sanchez" and "Five Families."

'The Gospel means Revolution'

Some Answers To Today's Turmoil

A THEOLOGY OF PROTEST by Bernard Haring; Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 189 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Paul Brindel.

The author is a top Catholic theologian who offers some answers for today's turmoil. He explains that "people in authority today are subjected to more vitriolic criticism than at other periods in history because more is expected; faults which at other times would have been condoned, are now condemned openly."

This book "took shape as a result of discussions with youth, university protestors, laymen, priests, theologians, men and women of all ranks, avant-garde and rear guard bishops and cardinals."

As with his "Shalom: Peace" and "Acting On The Word," this volume by Haring will make few friends with the U.S. Hierarchy, or with educators "who have failed to produce leaders, as have most of the seminaries and schools of theology." For, the author warns: "The Gospel means Revolution," and cites "that whenever the church aligned herself in the past with the disintegrating system and attempted to suppress the emerging society by threats of anathema, she rendered a great disservice to herself. . .She weakened the credibility of her message."

A Find That Filled Gaps In History Of English

THE TREASURE OF SUTTON HOO by Bernice Grohskopf; Atheneum Publishers, 151 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

In the summer of 1939, archeologists from Ipswich Museum uncovered at Sutton Hoo in Suffolk a remarkable find: an almost completely intact Anglo-Saxon ship filled with weapons and treasures as for the burial of a king.

Adolf Hitler's invasion of Poland brought study of the articles to an abrupt end, and not until after the war did it become known how rich the find had been. It was, in fact, unparalleled, at least in the British Isles.

The treasure of Sutton Hoo proved that the kings of the Anglo-Saxon period ruled their little holdings with a magnificence hitherto unsuspected, and that they possessed coins and articles of both utility and adornment from as far away as Byzantium.

Bernice Grohskopf links the findings at Sutton Hoo closely with "Beowulf," the Anglo-Saxon epic which had been considered mostly a flight of fancy. In the light of the discovery, "Beowulf" appears more nearly an actual historical chronicle.

"The Treasure of Sutton Hoo" helps fill in a gap in the history of the English people — and thus, in the history of those who established the United States. It is profusely illustrated with photographs of the discoveries.

The Disease Of Civilization As Diagnosed By Alan Watts

By DON KEOWN

DOES IT MATTER? by Alan Watts; Pantheon, 125 pages, $4.95.

Alan Watts' newest book is a small one, composed entirely of previously published material, and unpretentiously titled "Does It Matter? Essays on Man's Relation to Materiality."

Yet it impressed us more than anything we have read in some time.

The contents range from articles written for Playboy through a lecture delivered before the Illinois State Medical Society to a series of short essays done for the Bulletin of the Society for Comparative Philosophy.

Despite the diversity of their sources, the pieces all have a common general theme: That civilized peoples, both Eastern and Western, but particularly the latter, have so tied themselves to systems based upon symbolism that they are unaware of actuality — "the living vibrations of the real world."

"The disease of civilization. . ." Watts writes in his introduction, "is that we have too much of a good thing: we confuse the marvelous facility of description with what is actually going on, the world as labeled and classified with the world as it is."

Much of our thinking, our talking and our reading, he charges, deal not with reality, but with its symbols. And "there is no grist for the intellectual mill if we get into a situation wehere thought is all about thinking, and where books are about nothing except other books."

Watts strikes at the heart of man's self-imposed predicament in his lead essay, "Wealth Against Money." We are preoccupied, he points out, not with true wealth, but with money which is only a symbol we have developed for it. It is exactly this confusion, Watts adds, that has triggered the revolt of the younger generation against the values of their parents.

"We should replace the gold standard by the wealth standard," Watts advocates, in exploding the monetary myths that have shaped our disastrous economic and social policy-making. ". . .as of today, an economic utopia is not wishful thinking but, in some substantial degree, the necessary alternative to self-destruction."

At the very root of our difficulties, Watts insists, is man's misconception of his own role in the greater scheme of things. He sees himself as a separate and apart individualist at odds and at war with not only his fellow man, and all other creatures, but with creation itself.

Man's future depends, according to Watts, upon his realization that he is, instead, an integral part of a great ecological pattern, interdependent and closely identified with all other forms of life down to the tiniest microbe. This concept, says Watts, is the basis of a return to reality and the antithesis of the mythology man has built up around himself.

"Basically, then, 'self' is not only the body but the whole energy system which embodies itself in all bodies," he writes. "The conceptual ego does not control this system any more than it controls the heart, but whereas ego is your idea of yourself, the total energy system of the universe is what you are. People who realize this could be trusted with technological power, for they would respect the external world, with all its subtle ecological balances, as they respect their own bodies. They would work with it and not against it. . ."

And: "The basic point to be understood, then, is that it is simply impossible to improve either oneself or the world by force. Because you yourself are both the organism and its environment, this is as futile as trying to lift yourself off the floor by your own bootstraps. Untold psychic and physical energy is wasted in this ludicrous enterprise, which, when seen to be absurd, is abandoned, releasing that energy for tasks that can indeed be accomplished.

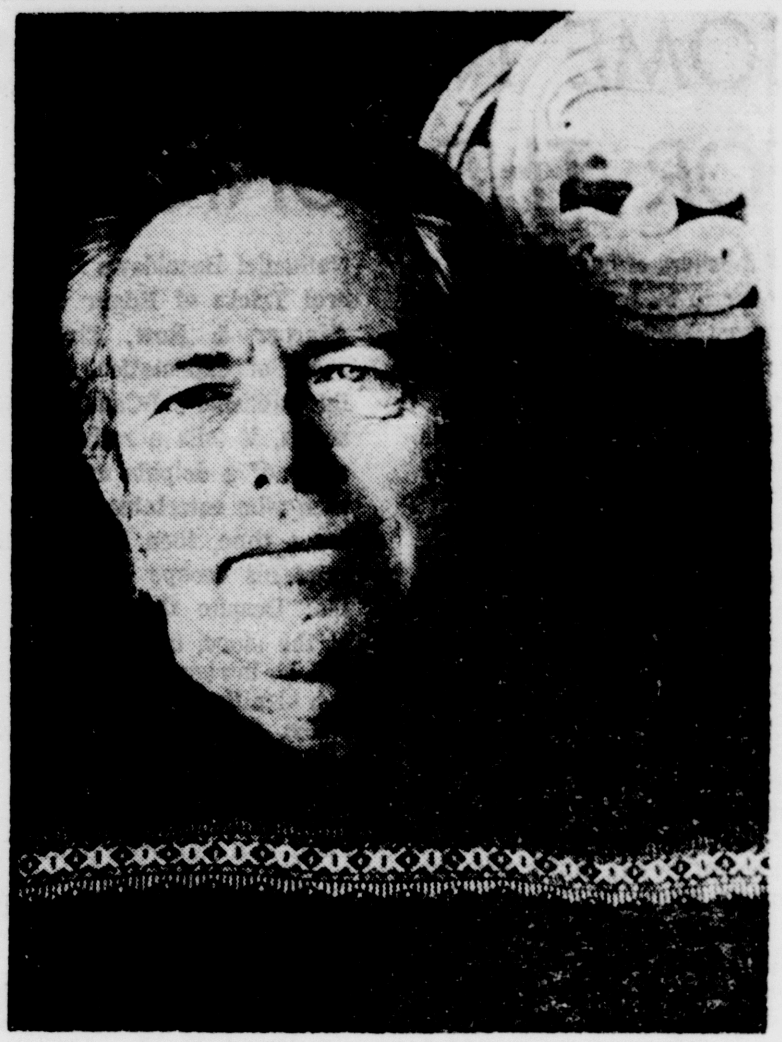

"Trying to force a lock bends the key, for which reason a truly intelligent man never forces an issue. He resorts instead to judo, the 'gentle way' of trimming one's sails to the wind. . .and of splitting wood along the grain. Such intelligence is therefore the alternative to violence."

Watts is fascinating in "Murder in the Kitchen" when he makes a lighter-hearted application of his thinking to the fine and neglected art of food preparation and appreciation, and equally entertaining when he attacks men's fashions.

He is less convincing when he defends the use of drugs in psychedelic and religious experimentation. The westerner, he seems to feel, needs the tools to reach the state of knowledge that many eastern philosophers have already attained. But didn't most of these Asian sages accomplish their great understanding without the aid of drugs? Still, Watts is more than interesting when he describes graphically the characteristics he underwent in his own efforts to stimulate mystical experiences within himself through drugs.

Watts' rich background as a scholar and interpreter of Zen Buddhism and other Eastern philosophies and religions is apparent throughout the book. But here he is less esoteric than in some of his other writing. It is a book intended to provoke an awakening and induce understanding in the westerner trapped in a social system that prefers money to wealth and where he eats the menu instead of the dinner. It is intended to direct man's attention from the symbols with which he has become obsessed to the true materialism — the environment of which he is a part and upon which his future rest utterly and completely. A man at peace with that environment is a man who may yet escape self-obliteration.

This is Watts at his most brilliant form. Even those who have read all or most of the essays in the journals in which they first appeared might well benefit from a re-reading — and — more important — a re-thinking of their meaty content.

ALAN WATTS of Sausalito, philosopher and authority on Eastern religions and beliefs, is the author of the new book "Does It Matter?" in which he charges that today's civilization has confused symbols with reality and has a misconception of man's role in the grand scheme of things. CLAIMING A TEST record of 86 per cent complete success and 97 per cent at least partial success against the tobacco habit, Smokewatchers International Inc. outlines a campaign for kicking cigarette addiction in "The Smoke Watchers' How-To-Quit Book," published by Bernard Geis Associates.

The premise is that before breaking the habit, you must first understand it, and the sub-habits upon which it has grown. This involves some deep probing and self analysis.

The victim at war with the filthy weed can use any and all available help, but nothing will work unless he is personally armed with that all-important weapon, willpower. Possessing that, then the Smokewatchers approach to the problem may well be worth a try.

After all the book costs but $5.95. And how many cartons of cigarettes will that buy?

FOR THE traveler bound for Great Britain this year, "The Good Food Guide" will prove an excellent companion, particularly if the tourist is food-minded.

Issued in England by Raymond Postgate and his Good Food Club and now revised by Christopher Driver, the guide has been published for Americans as a paperback by Clarkson N. Potter Inc.

The book reviews more than 1,600 eating places where Good Food Club inspectors and members have lunched, had tea or dined, and upon which they have rendered their opinions. General cuisine, house specialties, prices, atmosphere, service all are analyzed. Hours and closing days are given. Eating places with bars are so designated.

While the entire United Kingdom — and Ireland as well — is covered, the section on London is especially useful. The updated London restaurant list is large and detailed. There is a special roster of patisseries. And both budget and more expensive establishments are covered.

An added bonus are the motoring maps — 32 pages of these.

It is an unusually good guide guaranteed to put to rest for all time that old libel that tasty food cannot be found in Britain. Indeed, Britain is loaded with superior restaurants, and Postgate leads you to them.

SHELL SCOTT'S MURDER MIX by Richard S. Prather; Trident, 607 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Here is a real jackpot for fans of the "tough guy" type of private eye yarn.

Trident has packaged together three of Richard S. Prather's novels about the exploits and sexploits of the operator of Sheldon Scott, Investigations.

Scott can be either debonair or hardboiled, as the occasion requires. What he cannot be is inactive.

The three novels — "Dead Heat," "The Cheim Manuscript" and "Kill Me Tomorrow" — involve Scott with assorted Southern California types — film personalities, industrialists, race track figures, rich widows, and, yes, the Mafia.

Prather has produced a steady stream of Shell Scott adventures, blending action, humor, suspense, sex and irony, and his sales record to date exceeds 40 million copies.

RICHARD S. PRATHER

Forty-million buyers could be wrong — but not likely. Prather is not quite up to Ross Macdonald as a writer. But he's not too far behind.

SOME NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Publishers of books for juniors appear to be trying to make up for past neglect in issuing biographies about prominent black people.

Two of the most recent, both from Crowell, are "Somebody's Angel Child" by Carman Moore ($4.50) and "Malcolm X" by Arnold Adoff ($3.75).

The former is the story of Bessie Smith, the great blues singer from the slums of Chatanooga who led a temptuous but aristically productive life. It is part of the "Women in America" series and is straightforward biography, told plainly but sympathetically. There is a selected discography and photographs of Bessie Smith and her musical peers.

"Malcolm X" is for younger children and details the difficult life of one of the most controversial and most interesting men of this century. It follows Malcolm from juvenile delinquent and adult convict to his emergence as a forceful spokesman for the more militant blacks. Melcolm X is accorded the respect that no too many, particularly of the white race, showed to him when he was alive. His life story is treated as a source of inspiration for a thoughtful, not mindless, kind of militancy that Malcolm X came to represent in his last years.

Some other new books for juniors:

The name Benchley alone suffices as a promise of something witty and different, but Nathaniel Benchley's "The Several Tricks of Edgar Dolphin" (Harper & Row, $2.50) falls short of expectations. Part of the publisher's I-Can-Read Book series, it tells a rather routine story of a dolphin captured by men who entertains his captors for a time, then finally makes good his escape back into the sea. Despite the predictability of the story, children no doubt will be intrigued by a hero they can identify with Flipper of television fame. And Hawaii-born Mamoru Funai has provided appealing illustrations.

"What Is A Sister?" (Essandess) is a softcover compilation by Lee McGrath and Joan Scobey of children's answers to that question. "A sister is not the greatest thing in the world . . .," one begins emphatically. And Sharon summarizes: "A sister is a pest. Unless of course she isn't a pest. Then she's not human." Lisl Weil's illustrations are fun-filled. It's a clever little non-book for big, or little, sisters.

Goblins seem to have been on the decline in the children's literature that they have enriched for generations. One, however, makes a comeback in "Tops and Bottoms" (Four Winds, $3.95) by Lesley Conger. It's a really rollicking tale, with illustrations by Imero Gobbato to match, of a battle of wits between a clever farmer and a determined but not-too-bright goblin. Mrs. Conger has adapted an old English folk story and produced a very funny and very entertaining book for small boys and girls.

"The Life of Keshav" (McGraw-Hill, $5.95) by Rama Mehta is an introduction for American boys and girls to a very different way of life from their own. It is the story of the son of a poor village farmer in India whose struggle for education, even with the help of a scholarship, requires sacrifices on his own part and imposes hardships on his family. But the family is united in its determination that Keshav will have his schooling. A leading writer of India, Mrs. Mehta has presented an honest and meaningful portrayal of family life in her land that is both changing and bound by traditions and the past.

"KIDS COOKING" is a newly-published Doubleday and Co. book by Aileen Paul and Arthur Hawkins, both well known figures in the culinary field. Priced at $3.95, it offers instructions and recipes that introduce youngsters to the fundamentals of cooking, with delicious results. Miss Paul, who produces a New York television cooking program and is its star, is the wife of former child actor Freddie Bartholomew. Hawkins has written and and illustrated several cookbooks.

Ella Remains The True Jazz Singer And Still The First Lady Of Song

By MARY CAMPBELL

Ella Fitzgerald has been called a lot of complimentary things, such as "The First Lady of Song." But mostly she's called Ella, the biggest compliment of all.

It's like speaking of a beloved relative, somebody not seen often enough but who, when seen, never lets you down. And of course everybody knows whom you're talking about.

At her recent opening night at the Waldorf in New York, Ella sang more new songs than old. But, unlike some mature singers who splice a few rock-oriented numbers into a set and sound uncomfortable and self-conscious doing it, Ella makes any song she chooses her own.

SHE SWINGS lightly "This Girl's in Love with You;" scats around with "Open Your Window;" dances gracefully showing off how slim she has become after a chorus of "I'll Never Fall in Love Again;" growls out the beginning of "Spinning Wheel;" goes wild and high with "Get Ready," and ends with "Put a Little Love in Your Heart," moving to the beat and singing sweet and high.

Three of those songs are on her latest album, "Ella," out last August on Reprise. She's recorded a few things in California for the next album but doesn't know when she'll finish it. After New York, there's a European tour with the Count Basie band.

The Schwann Catalog lists 28 LPs by Ella Fitzgerald in its jazz section, of the more than 100 she has made. Asked whether there's something she'd like to record that so far she's missed, Miss Fitzgerald can't think of anything.

SHE SAYS, "They surprise us sometimes, with the songs they choose. But I like to try lots of things."

When Ella sings there's not only the famous tone and range and flexibility, but also a sense of improvisation and spontaneity, which always works.

There is a fault in some of her albums—the backup musicians are too heavy-handed, covering her voice instead of letting it wing where it will, and be heard. We assume that's a sin primarily of the arranger.

Ella needed to be flexible

ELLA FITZGERALD
52, and going strong

mentally as well as vocally at her New York opening, when she introduced the unpredictable Louis Armstrong who was in the audience. Louis joined her in front of the band, put an arm around her neck, took the mike away from her and said, "Relax while I do 'Mack the Knife,' and think up something we can do together." Louis sang "Mack the Knife;" Ella sang a bit of scat alongside, without the mike, and the audience loved it.

THE AUDIENCE loved it still more when Louie asked the band if they knew "You Won't Be Satisfied," told them, "You all just follow us," and they sang a duet of that.

Ella has recorded for Decca, Verve and Capitol in the past. It was the idea of Norman Granz, whose "Jazz at the Philharmonic" she toured with for years, that she do a "songbook" series. One of those, "Ella Fitzgerald Sings the Irving Berlin Songbook," won her a Grammy Award as best female vocalist of 1958. She also won Grammies in that category: for 1959 "But Not for Me;" 1960, both "Mack the Knife" and the LP "Ella in Berlin," and 1962, "Ella Swings Brightly with Nelson Riddle."

Ella, who now is 52, got her start as almost everyone knows — by winning the $10 prize at the weekly amateur show at the Apollo Theater in Harlem, at age 16. Chick Webb heard her and hired her as his band singer. The two of them wrote "A-Tisket, A-Tasket" in 1938. After his death in 1939 she fronted his band for three years.

Ella now lives in Beverly Hills, with three nieces and her 20-year-old son Ray, son of jazz bassist Ray Brown from whom she was divorced some years ago. She performs about 10 months of the year, getting out there with the small hand mike, the large handkerchief for touching her brow after a heated number, the hand over one ear so she can hear herself through the mike, the repertoire of hundreds of songs, the on-pitch, bendable voice. The true jazz singer. The First Lady of Song, Ella.

THE DIANTHUS is but one of the many fine representatives of the perennial plant classification that serves Marinites so well in so many ways —in massed beds, as accent plants and as borders. This is the low-growing China Doll, a 1970 All America Selection. It is a compact grower that produces loads of blooms in red, salmon and red-and-white colorations. It can be used in borders in combination with other plants or by itself. Or a few can be tucked in here and there about a garden for colorful accents. Or they can be grown in clay pots to decorate a patio.

Perennial Plants Will Do Many Jobs, And Will Do Them Well

Perennial bedding plants play a large role in Marin gardens.

They can be used in large colorful masses, to fill narrow beds, in evergreen shrub settings or in borders with other flowering plants. Many excel in containers for use on porch and patio.

Such perennials as the daisy family, delphiniums and carnations have long enjoyed popularity, as have many others. There are many perennials worthy of planting, and nurserymen have a large selection of the long-lived perennials to choose from right now.

TWO HIGHLY recommended by nurserymen are the Transvaal daisies and marguerites.

The familiar daisy flower and exquisite colors of the Transvaal daisy (gerbera) are two of its popular assets.

The four-inch slender-rayed or double flowers can be found in hues of yellow, coral, pink, orange, red and white. From early spring to early winter, these flowers grow to 18 inches in height. They are stunning in beds by themselves and in random clusters as handsome accents in the garden.

PLANT TRANSVAAL daisies in full or not less than a half-day's sun. Good drainage is a must. And in setting out the plants, make sure the crown is above the soil.

Marguerites are a California favorite because of their long blooming season and their prolific flower production. So popular are they, nurseries have them available in many sizes: From small transplants in nursery flats to larger landscape size specimens, which are already adorned with loads of flowers.

Besides the white and yellow marguerites, which achieve a height of two to three feet, there are pink ones and felicia, sometimes called blue marguerite. The pinks average about two feet tall and make excellent edgings around permanent plantings. The lower growing felicia adds a cool touch to summer gardens.

Use Those Fences To Spotlight Your Showiest Plantings

By their very nature, fences increase the awareness of what's planted against them. They serve as a backdrop for some of the garden's most rewarding effects.

While shrubs in other parts of the garden may recede into the depths of greenery, against a fence they are prominently displayed. In selecting shrubs, it is important to insure that this prominence is accorded those plant materials that benefit by it.

The form and structure of shrubs planted against a fence or wall are all important. Tall shrubs with an open pattern of growth are more desirable in most cases than tall shrubs which grow into dense masses of foliage. They permit the fence to show itself as a continuous, unbroken line.

SOME TOP choices include the bottle brushes, twisted junipers, xylosma and pineapple guava.

Besides their upright growth, the bottle brush provides loads of red blooms throughout the year. The twisted juniper has gained its fame because of the columnar, twisting growth, and dark green foliage. Xylosma has appealing apple green pendulous foliage which is a lovely addition to the garden.

Pineapple guava is erect-growing. It has beautiful waxy red and white blooms followed by tasty and edible fruit. The foliage is a gray-green.

AMONG THE gray-foliaged shrubs there are several to consider for planting in the foreground of fences: The shrub-type eucalyptus (such as E. rhodantha which has carmine blooms); feathery cassia, with needlelike foliage and yellow flowers; and jacknife acacia, with saw-tooth leaves.

The eucalyptus has large, semi-oval foliage; the acacia boasts yellow flowers. All will create an interesting pattern against a fence.

With smaller shrubs, the open pattern is less important, but form is still a matter of interest. Chartreuse-like Gold Coast juniper and other dwarf-type junipers, heavenly bamboo, Oregon grape and New Zealand flax are all well-adapted.

BLOOM SHOULD have a high priority for planting a fence. Camellias, rhododendrons, azaleas and fuchsias are perfect for shaded and semi-shaded areas.

In the sun, use roses, hibiscus, tall bearded iris and bird of paradise. The flowers are even more outstanding with a fence to backdrop them.

Nurserymen will have espaliered plants such as pyracantha, magnolia, loquat and others already started on trellises. These give the gardener a chance to create his own patterns against a fence.

The list of opportunities is endless. Not mentioned are the many good vines to use.

Best bet is to let a nurseryman fill you in on the complete list.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- May is a good month to start annuals for garden color during the warm summer months. Saliva, celosia or cock-s comb, zinnias and dwarf dahlias are just four that will give you bright, continuous color.
- Transplant roses from nursery containers into your garden. Many of the new varieties and old-time favorites are in full bloom now at the nurseries.
- Feed azaleas and camellias with an acid-type plant food this month. Water them frequently during warm weather.
- Rhododendrons are still showing their colors in nurseries. Shop for them while you can choose the exact color you desire for your garden.
- There is still time for one last planting of gladiolus bulbs for a late bloom.
- It's always a good time to plant trees in Marin County, and May is an especially good time for this worthwhile project.

You Can Fix That Broken Sash Cord

Handyman's Page

By ANDY LANG

It's a rare old house indeed that doesn't have at least one window with a broken sash cord.

If a window must be propped up to keep it from slamming down, it means that the sash cord probably has come apart. Because it appears to be a repair that shouldn't be tackled except by an expert and because there doesn't seem to be any emergency, it rarely gets fixed.

IT IS POSSIBLE, however, for any home owner to replace a sash cord with a few simple tools and by following certain directions. The replacement can be made with a sash rope and weight or with one of the more modern methods of opening and closing windows. Using sash chains rather than cords provides double-hung, certically sliding windows with both extra durability and workability.

Sash chain and accessories are available in bulk or in packages in most hardware and building supply stores. It takes from 10 to 12 feet of sash chain per average-sized window plus four individual spiral spring fasteners and hooks in metals to match the chain finish.

THE ONLY TOOLS required are a hammer, small chisel or screwdriver and a pair of pliers with a sharp wire-cutter to cut the chain to desired lengths. Here's how the job is done!

1. With the window shut, take a chisel or screwdriver and hammer and loose and pry off wooden strips holding the windows in place at the top and both sides. Be sure you gently remove them to avoid splitting at the corners or in the middle. Remove the top and bottom window units and set them aside.

2. On each side of each window, you will find two sash weights suspended inside the window channels by old sash ropes, one or both of which will be broken. To expose and get at these weights, unscrew the interior wooden cover from the top and bottom of both sides. Remove the ropes from the sash weights and from the pulleys on each side of the window channel.

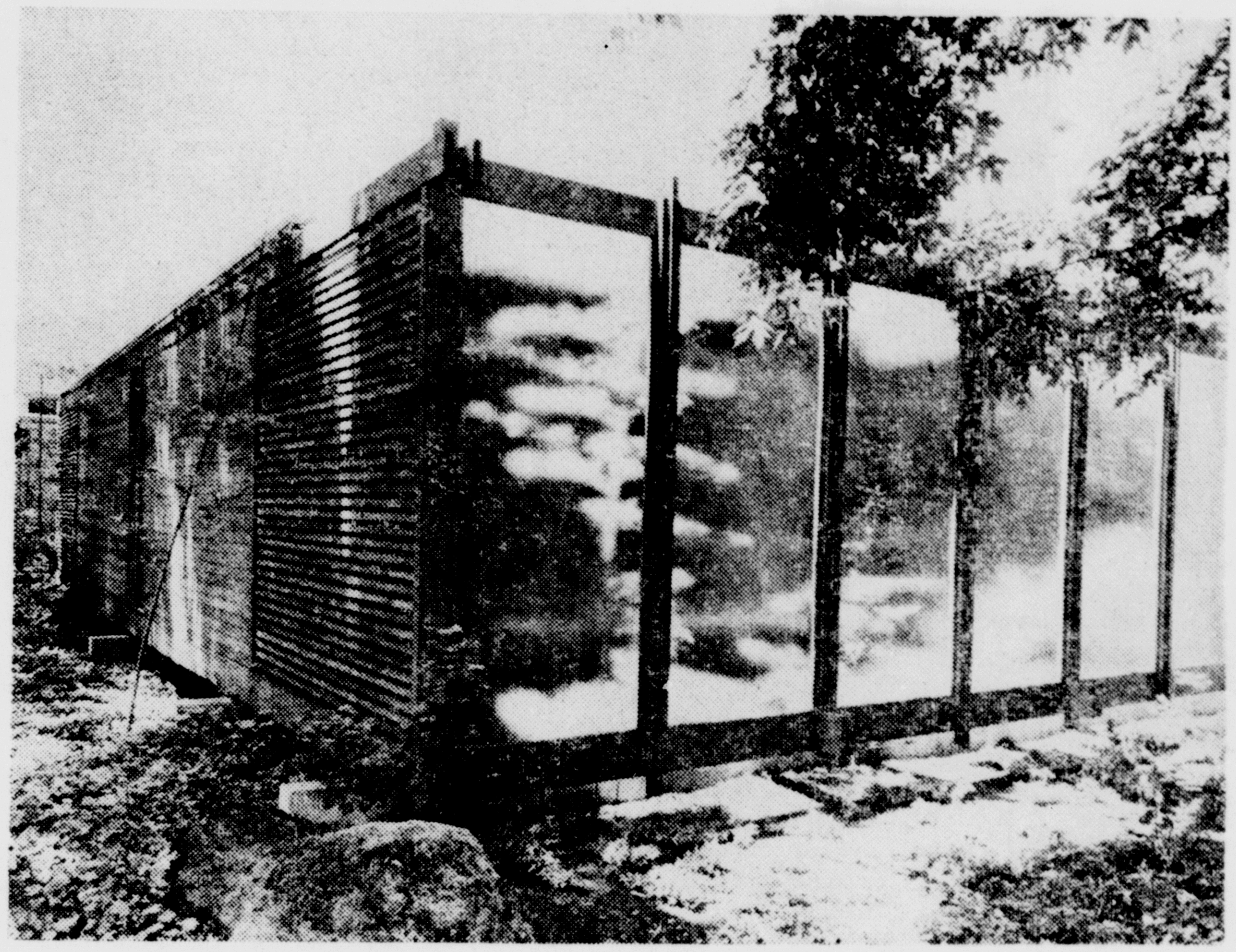

3. Guide the "eye" end of the sash chain over the pulley, leaving the other "closed" end of the chain hanging inside the window frame. Thread the closed end through the opening in one end of the sash weight. Take one of the metal sash hooks and thread the narrow loop of the hook through the closed end of the chain. Then fasten the wider end of the hook around the chain to hold it firmly to the sash weight.

TAKE THE OPEN eye end of the same chain and thread it through the spiral spring fastener to the middle of the spring until the chain is suspended. Place the chains and springs in the recesses of the sash.

Repeat this process for the top and bottom sashes and pulleys on each window of the interior wood channel. Make sure all four hooks are firmly closed and that the chain is securely held in the middle of all four spiral springs.

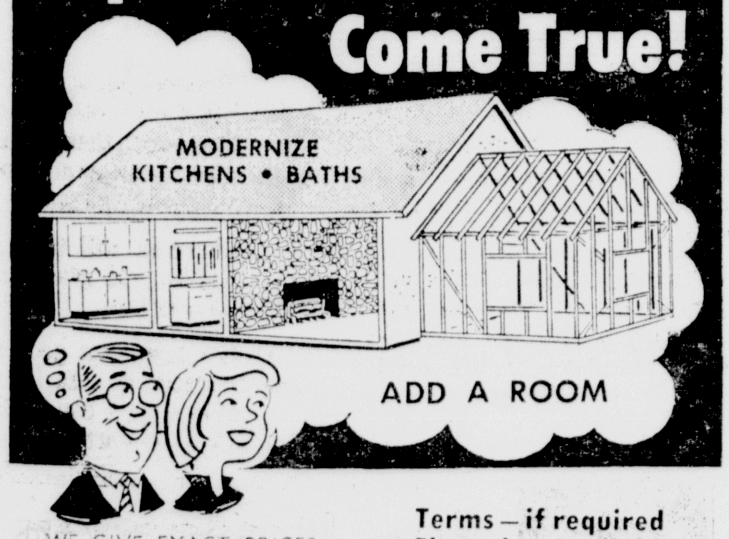

You then replace the top and bottom of the window, holding both sections in place until you have secured them by replacing the wooden parting strips at the top and both sides. Finally, renail the wooden strips.

These instructions, which may seem involved to someone who has never worked on a window, can be followed quite easily by taking each step in turn.

VERTICAL AND HORIZONTAL western framing lumber have been combined here with translucent plastic panels to create an attractive privacy screen. Easy to maintain, the lumber framing blends naturally with any landscaping. Roofing, fencing, breezeway and other wood framing ideas are all covered in a 16-page full-color brochure that can be obtained free of charge from the Wood Products Industry Fund, 1240 Bayshore Highway, Burlingame, Calif., 94010.

EXCELLENT WORKMANSHIP - Like this assures you of years and years of trouble-free service. Most men like to look "under the hood", so when you see this bedroom, you may wish to note these superior construction features: DOVE-TAIL DRAWER CONSTRUCTION. Precision fitted drawer components are joint to stay with more costly dove-tail construction.

KILN DRIED HARDWOOD FRAMES. Carefully selected hardwoods, thoroughly seasoned and dried in kilns. Frame can never bow or warp.

CORNER-BLOCKED, REINFORCED CONSTRUCTION. A must for reliable service. All points of maximum stress are reinforced. All corners are blocked for stability.

DOUBLE AND TRIPLE DOWELED JOINTS. A much more costly but vastly superior method to secure joints. Found on the most expensive pieces made. Powerful marine glues were used throughout.

Burl Ives Likes To Reflect

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Burl Ives, the portly lawyer in "The Bold Ones," rambles around the country living in a Hollywood apartment, a Manhattan apartment and an adobe house near Santa Fe, N.M.

There's very little Ives hasn't done as a performer: won an Oscar (The Big Country), cut 67 record albums, appeared in 23 movies and uncounted television shows along with 13 Broadway shows.

Now, he says, is a time for reflection.

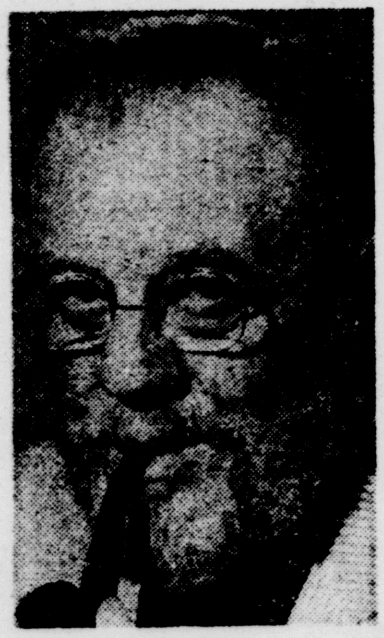

HE PREFERS to do his reflecting alone and preferably in Santa Fe.

His wife, Helen, manages his career from New York and lives there almost the year around. They maintain communication by daily telephone call whenever Ives is away from New York City, which is as often as he can manage. He spends a total of three or four weeks a year there.

"Helen loves New York and I hate it," he explains.

He's not crazy about Hollywood either, but this is where the work is.

HIS QUARTERS in Southern California amount to a two-bedroom apartment, one of which has been converted into an office. The place also includes a music room for recording and a library.

BURL IVES
No neckties or hunting

He cooks simple meals for himself and dines out often.

Ives manages to work in the NBC series only 48 days a year. His workday generally begins at 7 a.m. He quits at 6 p.m. as specified in his contract.

"I should have known better than play a lawyer," he says. "Even in scenes where I have no dialogue I have to sit there because I've been established in the scene."

WHEN HE'S not recording, writing or acting, Ives, a native of Illinois, sneaks off to Santa Fe to poke around among the pottery and bones of a long-dead Indian civilization.

It is also his favorite spot for riding a new motorcycle.

One of Ives' hobbies is collecting pistols, rifles and shotguns of assorted sizes and shapes.

Ives doesn't believe in hunting, identifying himself as a tin can shooter. He walks out into the desert, lines up old bottles and cans and fires away for an hour at a time.

Neither does he like to wear a necktie. Open sports shirts, loose slacks and sandals suit him fine. He was given a squash blossom warrior necklace by the Navajo Indians and, when he attends a party, wears the necklace in place of a tie.

The actor-singer finds himself jetting to Nashville, Tenn., regularly to record country and western music, much of it folk songs.

He learned folk music as a child in Hunt City Township, Jasper County, Illinois, from his grandmother whose ancestry is traced to the 17th Century America.
